In the Maze of Beauty and a Baron

An American woman at the feet of a foreign nobleman; the same American woman, scorned, fights in court to the last ditch, admitting everything, even her love. Why? Nobody knows.

The very woman who has done these things wouldn't be able to tell. Mrs. Marcus Dennison Russell, rich, handsome, vivacious—a widow with all the charm that young widows have—wouldn't know. Yet she saw the Baron Christian von Motz, of Berlin, go to Ludlow street jail and has kept him there for three weeks just because he wouldn't marry her after he had promised to.

As long as she kept on promising Mrs. Russell was the soul of devotion. She gave him money for everything; she paid his bills. She gave him her jewels to pawn—even the ring that Marcus Dennison Russell of the Rough Riders put on her finger not long before he went to Cuba as a sergeant to meet his death alongside of "Ham" Fish and those others who died in the first fight on Cuban soil.

But when the festive baron forgot his promises and told her bluntly that he couldn't marry it was another story. Mrs. Russell turned in her wrath, had the man arrested and went to court time and again in her effort to keep him behind the bars—his man whom she had promised to marry.

BARON FORGOT.

Baron von Motz is well connected in Berlin. He was a second lieutenant in the Eleventh Uhlans, one of the Kaiser's pet commands. His father stood high at court and with the Emperor.

With such antecedents it was not hard for the young officer to join the best clubs in the German capital. He proved that he was to the manner born by winning two prizes presented by the royal family—a gold cigarette case given by the Crown Prince and embellished with the Imperial arms, and a gold watch and fob from the Emperor for fencing proficiency. He took them with him to Ludlow street jail the other day—prizes given by the Kaiser could not be pawned, though Mrs. Russell's wedding ring was pledged without question.

Baron von Motz was first an attaché at Washington for a while. Then he went back to Germany, leaving behind him quite a wide swath of American hearts. But he himself was heart-whole and fancy free.

LOVED CHORUS GIRL.

Rigo, the Hungarian, who ran away with the Princess Chimay (Clara Ward, the Detroit heiress of millions), was playing in the Wintergarten, Berlin. Von Motz had a pretty chorus girl from one of the theaters there with him one evening. Rigo played at the girl and made his eyes at her while he swept his bow over the strings.

The girl changed her seat so that her back might be toward Rigo. The gypsy promptly walked around the room, playing the while, until he faced her again. Once more he made his eyes.

Thereupon Von Motz hit him over the head with a chair, ending the flirtation. He kept on with his gayeties. One night he jumped his horse into the Kaiser fountain, presented by the Emperor himself. He won the wager which he had made on the proceeding. The Kaiser was furious. His family despaired. His sister, the Countess von Waldersee, begged her mother to send her erring brother to this country on an allowance, which finally she did. His uncle, Baron Fred von Motz, got him leave and so it chanced that he came again to America. He started in business in Omaha. And there he made a hit with every woman he met.

TALL, FAIR BLONDE.

He was tall, blond, fair-haired and blue-eyed, the soul of humor and the life of every gathering. His bon camaraderie, his gaiety and cleverness made him the most popular man in Omaha. His walk was a wonder—it was so military and so dignified. And when Miss Keeline, daughter of one of the richest men in Council Bluffs, announced her engagement to the Baron, there wasn't a girl in all the State that didn't envy her.

BUT HE SPENT MORE THAN FIFTY DOLLARS

But the engagement was broken almost before it was made. Perforce the Baron left Omaha. He went to St. Louis. He left there when two divorce suits were instituted in which his name was mentioned.

It was Chicago next for the Baron. He went into the brokerage business, got into more trouble, was named in four more divorce suits and came to New York in May last; penniless, his allowance eaten up for months ahead.

He had his same engaging presence, his wonderful smile and his sense of humor. And he was just as fascinating to women.

WOMEN WERE SERIOUS.

What Von Motz took as a joke the average woman who met him took perfectly seriously.

The Waldorf-Astoria soon got to know the Baron, and Sherry's and Delmonico's and Martin's. His first acquaintance was Mrs. Nannie K. Waddingham, a beautiful Southern widow from Nashville, who now lives in New York. She, in turn, introduced the dashing Baron to her friends. He was taken up by the Southern set and nothing was too good for him—this protégé of the Kaiser's, this handsome young officer of the Uhlans, who had such a way of saying little nothings to every pretty woman he chanced to meet.

One night at the Actors' Fund Fair he was introduced to Mrs. George M. Baxter. He was all attention and Mrs. Baxter was pleased with the fine-looking young German officer who had such polished manners. And so it was perfectly natural that Mrs. Baxter should invite him to a cozy little box party of fifteen which she gave a few evenings later at the Belasco Theater to see the "Rose of the Rancho."

One of the guests was Mrs. Marcus Dennison Russell.

PRETTY WIDOW.

She was altogether charming in her stunning Paris costume—Sergeant Russell had been dead long enough for her to put off widow's weeds, and the Baron was plainly smitten. As for Mrs. Waddingham, she was quite distraught throughout the evening, and poor Mrs. Baxter, who was giving the party, was at her wit's end to keep things going. The more Mrs. Waddingham pouted the more Mrs. Russell smiled. It was very plainly a rivalry of widows.

The Baron asked if he might call. Why, certainly, Mrs. Russell would be only too pleased. And he did call and there were drives and automobile rides and little teas and charming dinners a dux at the Waldorf-Astoria, with the theater afterwards.

Very frankly, Mrs. Russell was deeply in love. She told her friends so and she looked it, too, whenever the Baron was around. And why shouldn't she be? Here was a charming young fellow, fresh from the court of the Kaiser, well connected and rich—at least in prospect. But that wouldn't matter, anyway. Mrs. Russell, who was Miss Mary McDavock, of Nashville, had plenty of money of her own. And it wasn't that she cared for a title, either, because the more noble and richer Prince and Duke Alfred Zai and Bey, of Beirut, had already chosen her his hand and she wouldn't have it, even though it would have made her a Princess.

LOVED HIM ALONE.

She loved her Baron alone. It was over the telegrams at the Waldorf, to say nothing of the highballs. Mrs. Russell whispered the sweet secret to Mrs. Baxter, and Mrs. Baxter told it to Mrs. Waddingham and—there you are.

"Well," said the Baron, with that smile of his, "I am engaged and I may be married; but you never can tell, you never can tell!"

And everybody, as they congratulated him, thought it a wonderfully clever joke. Mrs. Waddingham went away to Tennessee to see her three small children and the Baron didn't even get a chance to say good-bye.

Mrs. Russell and the Baron were soon everywhere. The widow announced her wedding for August 10. It was to be quite simple. As she explained, there would have to be a civil marriage to make it legal in Germany, where her husband-to-be was to take her, but then the American conventionalities demanded in religious ceremony and so they would have that, too. In preparation for the event Mrs. Russell took an apartment at No. 425 West One Hundred and Sixteenth street, furnished it elaborately and began counting the days until her wedding.

Again the Baron and Mrs. Russell were Mrs. Baxter's guests. She gave an auto party up the Hudson and at the charming little Nixie ten house, on the Croton river, the formal announcement of the wedding date was made.

ALMOST WEDDING EVE.

It was almost the wedding eve. Once more Mrs. Baxter gave a party at the theater in honor of the engaged pair. In the next box sat another party and to it was Mrs. Onita Conard, of Philadelphia, widow, too, and young and beautiful into the bargain.

The Baron remembered. He had known her long ago. When the party drifted out of the box during the entrance he paid his debts to the pretty woman he hadn't seen for so many years. He found that she was free again and rich, and she had still all her rare Spanish beauty.

It was the beginning of the end. "Was is that?" demanded Mrs. Russell when she came back to the box.

"Why, only an old friend, my dear," answered the Baron.

The next night the Baron explained to his fiancée that he was a little short of funds and that he was to entertain some of the officers of the battleship Alabama at Martin's. It was to be a stag party, but it would be an expensive one. Would she let him have a little money?

Of course, Mrs. Russell would, but her income was all spent. Would he take her diamond heart and raise the money on that? Of course the Baron would. And he did, promising to spend only $50.

But it wasn't a stag party and he spent more than $50. In fact, Mrs. Russell had a hard time afterward getting back $30 out of the $200 raised at a pawnshop by her Baron. There were half a dozen ladies at the dinner, and one of them was Mrs. Conard, the old friend.

FAILED FOR CLERGYMEN.

The Baron didn't add that he and Mrs. Conard had tried to get a clergyman that very night to marry them. Mrs. Russell found that out later—found out that the Rev. Dr. Houghton, of the Little Church around the Corner, didn't answer the phone, and that the Rev. Mr. Warren, who used to be hotel chaplain, was out of the city, and so they couldn't get anybody to tie the knot at that time of night.

It was a kind friend who told Mrs. Russell next day.

In a twinkling the woman changed. From a fond and doting fiancée, who even paid her sweetheart's bills for shoes and socks, she turned. She could stand anything but—the other woman.

"I want the money you got for my diamond heart," she demanded of her Baron. "I've lost it," said the Baron. "Why don't you marry me then?" "Why, I'm not going to marry you," said the Baron quite seriously. "My mother wouldn't let me. I thought you understood it was only a joke."

The Baron went away to see Mrs. Conard. And when Mrs. Russell heard that he was wearing her old wedding ring on the same finger with Mrs. Conard's diamond engagement ring her fury knew no bounds. She had given him Sergeant Russell's pledge of affection, and she wanted it back.

SCOFFED AT FIANCEE.

Another kind friend told her how the Baron used to laugh when she showed the two rings on one finger as he said: "This is Mary's wedding ring and this is Onita's engagement ring. I wear both." Mrs. Russell was too late. The Baron had pawned the wedding ring for $3.

"I couldn't marry Mrs. Russell," he explained to his friends. "She's old enough to be my mother. It has been an awful mistake."

But Mrs. Russell couldn't see it that way. She promptly had the Baron arrested. He was put in Ludlow street jail, with a civil suit hanging over his head and a criminal charge awaiting him. He got out the other day, much to Mrs. Conard's delight. She took him away in her auto. And then Mrs. Russell, her indignation still at white heat, said:

"If more American women would only make examples of the young foreigners who come here to impose upon people there would be fewer adventurers seeking to marry women of wealth and position."

"Well," said Mrs. Conard, when she heard it, "I am going to marry him, just the same."

HOW QUEEN OF MADAGASCAR TAKES ANNUAL BATH

Queen Ranavalona III, the exiled ruler of Madagascar, takes a bath but once a year; but when she does perform her ablutions the ceremony takes on all the impressiveness of an affair of state.

Ranavalona III is queen in name only. In reality she is a prisoner in the hands of the French. She is in the semi-confinement of Algiers. She is the third descendant of the great Ilovas King, Radama I, who a century ago reduced the dusky cannibal tribes of Madagascar to subjection, set himself upon a throne, and began the work of forcing civilization upon his people. In 1920 Radama was formally recognized by Great Britain, and from that day the troubles of the royal family of Madagascar began. Ultimately the French laid claim to the entire island, and in 1897 conquered it. Ranavalona III was then on the throne. The French soldiers made her prisoner and sent her to Reunion Island. In March, 1899, she was transferred to Algiers.

GOES SHOPPING JUST ONCE A YEAR. Although really a prisoner, Ranavalona is treated with a great deal of consideration by the French. Once every year she is permitted to visit Paris, where she is received with a sad mockery as a real queen. But her trip to Paris has its delights, for the poor exiled queen is given $25,000 and permitted to shop. She revels in dainty frocks, expensive gowns, opera cloaks, embroidered lingerie, silken hose and the costly things that Paris has to sell. Then when her vacation is ended, she goes back to her exile in Algiers, to rule in petty state over her little court.

Ranavalona has been permitted to bring a large retinue of her former servants from Madagascar. She has "palace" in Algiers and keeps up as much bedazzled state and native ceremony as her limited allowance from France permits.

Among the ceremonies of Ranavalona's little court is her annual bath. She takes a real bath once a year. It is an elaborate bath, but conducted with a great deal of mystery.

The queen takes her bath in a silken tent set up in the grounds surrounding her Algerian palace. At each corner of the tent is a native guard, clad in the picturesque uniform of a soldier of the Madagascar royal regiment. Twenty paces from each native soldier is stationed a French soldier. This line of double guards keeps the curiously intrusive at a safe distance from the tent, which incloses the royal bath.

At noon on the day appointed for the ceremony of the queen's bath a gayly decorated procession winds its way from the queen's residence through the trees to the silken tent.

First comes a guard of native soldiers. Then a detachment of French soldiers in full dress uniform, commanded by a major. Then there is a band of native musicians with guitars and instruments playing plaintive melodies. The queen's train of the robes follows, and then comes her chamberlain, with his gold chain and white wand. Two ladies in waiting come next, accompanied by two little pages.

A line of Madagascar girls, servants of the queen, are next to be seen. Each carries on her head a large tub filled with rose scented water. They walk erect, clothed only from the hips down, the naked upper half of their bodies glistening in the sun like ebony statues. They carry the water for the royal bath. With them are more servants, with towels, silver jars of soap and perfumes.

BATHTUB LINED WITH SILK.

Reaching the tent the water carriers enter and fill the huge bathing tank, which is simply a modern bathtub, lined with yellow and red silk. When the bath is ready the queen, accompanied only by two of her female servants and the mistress of the robes, enters the tent; the guards withdraw to a safe distance. The assemblage keeps an awed silence. From the tent comes the noise of distinctly feminine giggles, low murmured exclamations, the soft splashing of water.

Then for a long time there is silence, while the attendants are dressing the queen. Presently she emerges from the tent, the little procession is reformed and the queen returns to her palace, refreshed by her first bath in twelve long months.

Never Did Cupid Get Worse Handled Than in This Case

BATTERED and battered as he is, shot and torn through and through, the physicians are hopeful for young Mr. Cupid, who was so badly hurt in Des Moines, Ia., the other day. He has survived terrible injuries before and, thanks to his strong constitution, it is thought that he will recover in time.

The diagnosis card at the Hospital for the Cripple and Crippled Hearts shows the following injuries:

Arrest or assault.
Imprisonment as a lunatic.
Insanity hearing.
Injunction No. 1 against making love.
Injunction No. 2 against speaking to a certain young woman.
Injunction No. 3 against using the telephone to her.

Contentment proceedings for violating the injunction.

A $500 fine for talking.

But the sacrifice has not been made in vain. James C. Payton, a young jeweler of Manitowish, Col., and pretty Miss Katherine Homan, a Des Moines belle, are man and wife. Cupid is satisfied, but not mamma-in-law. At last reports the match might as well never have been made, for Mrs. Homan has taken her daughter away again and is speeding over the prairies, with her newly-made son-in-law in hot but vain pursuit.

And who shall say that in stork, wind-swept Iowa, where all the talk is of crops and hogs, romance is dead? Never did a couple fight harder to be married. Never did a man cling closer to the girl he loved, facing arrest, court injunctions, contempt proceedings, charges of insanity and what not for the sake of a girl. And what's more, he even held out when the girl herself went on the stand and begged the authorities to keep him away from her.

Miss Homan's first bow before the public was made when she appeared to prosecute Mr. Payton. Her last was when she married him.

THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE.

Was it hypocrisy? She says "No!" And yet this strange girl actually married the man against whom she had repeatedly appeared in court.

One minute she was calmly telling of her bitter hatred of the man. The next she was whispering sweet nothings to him, and writing him the sweetest of love letters.

"He's hypnotized her," declared the mother, "and she doesn't know what she's doing. And I don't want him as my daughter's husband, because once he's used to gambling."

This before the marriage. And after it Mrs. Homan as stoutly averred that Mr. Payton used force to compel her daughter to become his bride. Be that as it may, Mrs. Homan still has the upper hand, but nobody knows for how long.

It is a year now since the famous case of Homan vs. Payton came into the courts. Miss Payton was the first to take action. Even her mother didn't know what was up. Here was her daughter, a beautiful, dignified girl of social position, actually appearing in a police court as complainant against a man!

Miss Homan filed an information against young Mr. Payton and had him arrested. On the stand she swore that he was continually annoying her by his undesired attentions.

And, mind you, she has since married this same young man!

"Not guilty!" replied the young man to the court's query.

When will you stop annoying the young lady?" asked the court.

"I am not annoying her," answered young Mr. Payton, quite calmly. "I love her and she loves me."

Miss Homan refused to go further in court, but her family did. And they failed to prove their case; the ardent young wooer went free, honorably discharged.

"But don't bother the plaintiff again," cautioned Judge Mathis, "so long as she doesn't care for your attentions."

Things weren't allowed to be quiet for long. A few days later the young man was arrested again. This time he was accused of being an insane person.

Again Miss Homan made the charge. She alleged in just so many words that Payton's infatuation for her had caused him to lose his mind.

An insanity commission gravely met to pass upon the charges. In his own behalf the young man proves that he had been violent to no one. The commission further held that to be love-sick didn't mean that a person was insane. Again Payton was discharged.

"If we send every infatuated youth to the insane asylum," said one of the members of the commission, "there wouldn't be any room there for anybody else."

But despite the fact that her sweetheart had spent two periods in jail because of her charges, Miss Homan didn't relent yet. She appealed to the civil courts. She asked for an injunction to prevent him from calling upon her and to keep him from speaking to her should they meet in the street. Upon her testimony the injunction was granted.

Hardly a week had passed before young Payton was dragged to court charged with violating the stern injunction.

"Send him to jail for contempt," demanded Miss Homan.

But the young man pleaded for mercy. "DEAR JIM, CHEER UP," WROTE SHE.

"I promise not to speak to her again unless she speaks to me first," he said, and so he went free.

MISS KATHERINE HOMAN, NOW MRS. JAMES C. PAYTON.

But this was only a two day's respite. Hardly was the ink on the papers dry before young Payton was again before the tribunal. This time Miss Homan wanted her persistent admirer enjoined from calling her up on the telephone or trying to communicate with her in any way. This order was promptly issued, and young Mr. Payton once more went his way.

Again the peace lasted but a little while.

The young man kept his promises. He hadn't called upon her, he hadn't written to her or even telephoned. But he liked to come up when Miss Homan was walking with some other man and, without a word to her, proceeded to knock him down.

William Clement was the first victim. Again Miss Homan appeared in court, when young Payton was arrested for assault.

"I will hear the whole story," declared Judge Howe, rather impatiently, "before I grant any more injunctions in this matter."

"So young Mr. Payton went on the stand and told the whole story.

"Why," he protested, "we are engaged. She is just doing this court business to keep her Willie brother from butting into our affairs. We meet in secret and we intend to get married the first chance we get. She is wearing my diamond engagement ring now."

"For an answer Miss Homan went on the stand and told the whole story.

"I want to have him enjoined from annoying me," she said, very earnestly and very seriously. "I can't even sleep at night for thinking of plans to evade him. I want Mr. Payton enjoined from bothering me."

"May I take the stand again, your Honor?" asked the young man.

"Certainly," said the court, kindly. "I am tired of all this nonsense," he said, "and if she doesn't love me enough to marry me I am done with it. That brother of hers has had detectives after me for three years. He has followed me himself. And since his injunction was issued we have met every day by appointment in secret. But if this is going to keep up I must quit and leave the city."

And then to further prove his claim he produced this letter:

"Dear Jim—Cheer up! Things will be brighter after a while. Don't believe everything you hear." KATHERINE.

That settled it with the court. The injunction didn't issue.

"But," said the judge, "you'd better leave the girl alone or she'll drive you crazy."

And then came the crowning climax. The two young people promptly proceeded to elope from stern, loveless Iowa to warm, genial, love-pervaded Colorado. Thereby they proved that love is above the law, above mothers and brothers—above everything.

And even then neither Mrs. Homan nor young Mr. Homan, the brother, would give in.

"She doesn't love him," they insisted. "It's all a trick. He must have forced her to marry him through some mysterious influence he possesses over her. Why, she told us time and again she was through with him. There must be something strange about his influence over her."

But Mrs. Homan doesn't believe in talking long—she likes to act, too. Quick upon the announcement of the elopement, Mrs. Homan took the first train to Denver. She found Payton away from home and her daughter, now Mrs. Payton, alone in the house.

What she said no one knows—and there's the mystery.

But at any rate the young bride consented to go home with her mother again. They caught the first train East.

"Despite all this talk and this marriage ceremony," declared Mrs. Homan as she followed her daughter aboard the cars, "I don't intend to let this man Payton have my daughter."

Next day the bride rejoined her husband.

She had changed her mind. And more surprising still, her mother had changed her mind, too.

"I have loved James all the time," declared Mrs. Payton, "and I love him still. Nothing can ever part us."

"If I had known Katherine could not have been happy without Payton, I would have given my consent long ago," said Mrs. Homan. "But she always declared that she didn't love him and that she annoyed her. However, I know now that she was fooling and that she loved Payton all the time, but only feared the disapproval of our family."

"Any way, it won't be because she didn't get enough advice to make her happy," said the younger daughter, Elizabeth. "We have certainly made it plain that Payton wasn't the husband for her, and she has married with her eyes open."

THE HEART OF THE TREE.

What does he plant who plants a tree?
He plants the friend of sun and sky;
He plants the flag of breezes free;
The shaft of beauty towering high.
He plants a home to heaven anigh
For song and mother-caron of bird
In hushed and happy twilight heard—
The treble of heaven's harmony—
These things he plants who plants a tree.

What does he plant who plants a tree?
He plants cool shade and tender rain,
And seed and buds of days to be,
And years that fade and flush again;
He plants the glory of the plain;
He plants the forest's heritage;
The harvest of the coming age;
The joy that unborn shall ever see—
These things he plants who plants a tree.

What does he plant who plants a tree?
He plants in sap, and leaf, and wood,
In love of home and loyalty
And far-cast thought of civic good—
His blessings on the neighborhood
When in the hollow of his hand
He holds all the growth of all our land—
A nation's growth from sea to sea
Stirs in his heart who plants a tree.

—Henry Cuyler Bunner.

DICTATES OF FASHION

All shades of purple and lavender will be much used in the early fall millinery.

Pretty sashes and bretelles for party dresses are made of narrow ribbons, alternating with insertion of the same with edging with tiny ruffles of lace.

For street wear young girls will wear serried three-quarter length coats with plaited and plain skirts. Heavy gloves in tan or gray, hats very trimly trimmed, and perky bows are all the adjuncts needed for a correctly gowned schoolgirl.

The fad for self-trimming continues, and the smartest of the newest designs, not only in tailored but in the more formal costumes, show as much of a preference as ever for this style of trimming.

When plain tailored shirt waists are worn by school girls care should be taken that they are not too severe in effect. Sufficient fullness should be allowed to make the waists becoming to the immature figure.

GOSSIP FROM THE SAN FRANCISCO WEEKLIES

BIGGY'S INITIAL ACT.

The first official act of William J. Biggy as chief of police is to persuade the Supervisors to divert the $10,000 appropriated in the budget for a fire boat from this purpose to the purchase for his private use of a $4500 automobile—the rest to be used to hire extra patrolmen. What the Elisor's bill will amount to when he collects for the care-taking of Ruef remains to be seen. Mr. Biggy could not afford to give up the management of his laundry for nothing. His laundry enjoys a large and lucrative business and must have suffered from inferior management in his absence. Mr. Biggy's ability as a laundryman has long been recognized. For years he has had the contract for the laundry work of the Spreckels' steamers on the Oceanic line. His services to the prosecution have been sufficient to win him the chiefship, but that cannot compensate him for his expenditure of time and talent as Elisor. As to his qualifications to head the police department, we must not be hasty in passing judgment. There are those who still believe that criminology is a life-time study, not to be mastered even in seven or eight months of intimacy with Ruef. Others cynically suppose that the organization and methods of the police differ materially from those of the laundry. But so far we are not able to foretell just what Chief Biggy may or may not accomplish in office. His program, as announced in the prosecution's organ, is: "I intend to perform my duty by enforcing the law without fear or favor, letting my actions speak for themselves." His only conspicuous act so far is to divert money from the purchase of a fire boat to that of a private auto. Placing deeds against words, it is our belief that Chief Biggy has not made as promising a beginning as we had hoped, inspired by the utterances of the prosecution.—Town Talk.

THAT FIRE BOAT.

I remember well the discussion of methods of fire protection before the Committee of Fifty, a discussion in which not only the experts of our own fire department, whose efficiency even Ruef failed to impair, but the wisest and most capable architectural engineers and the shrewdest merchants of our stricken city took part. The first thing mentioned, and indeed the main theme, was the salt water auxiliary system, of which the fire boat was treated as an important and integral part. Wherever the remoteness of the completed salt piping was considered, the advice was to get fire boats immediately. Our most valuable asset, the water front, which more than anything else served to restore trade and uphold our commercial prestige, was saved by ordinary tug boats of very limited punting power. A fire tug could easily have saved the lumber yards of North Beach, with its powerful throw, and might have rendered other conspicuous service. The failure of former administrations to obtain a fire tug was considered by the committee little less than criminal negligence. With stand pipes running from the wharves across East street, it was proposed to meet all blazes along the water front by fire tug alone. But the fire tug has gone the way of the Burnham plans. Chief Biggy wants his touring car. The salt water plant, for its part, is still where the imbecile Union Labor board left it. Our new city fathers, selected impartially by the self-effective prosecution, are too busy quibbling over the Parkside franchise matter to bother about fire protection. The underground-municipally-owned-Geary-street road must be rebuilt at the cost of a million dollars—as a starter —while the lesser matters wait. Of course the public twice overwhelmingly voted down the Geary street proposition, but the public evidently does not know what is good for it. So with the last of our hopes for the much needed fire boat, we should rest assured that no Act of Providence will strike us while Heavenly selected Instruments are in control of our city government.—Town Talk.

BIGGY'S EVENTFUL CAREER.

The political resuscitation of Biggy is a most remarkable phenomenon. Years ago it was thought that Biggy had become a life member of the Down and Out Club, to which he was elected by the same agency that has once more blessed the city with his beneficent services. Biggy's political career was brought to the end of a chapter by that sterling young patriot, the Hon. James D. Phelan, and everybody thought it was the end of the story. So firmly convinced was the "Examiner" that the mortal part of Biggy had been deposited in an urn that the Hearst daily published an editorial epitaph designed to corroborate Shakespeare's dictum that the evil that men do lives after them. Never was man more brutally assailed than was Biggy in that masterly editorial diatribe. The distinction thus accorded the Hon. William Biggy was earned by him through a peculiar and an unfortunate set of circumstances. He had been appointed to the Police Commission by the Hon. James D. Phelan at the request of A. M. Lawrence, managing editor of the "Examiner," who had obtained from Mr. Phelan a promise to make Fred Esola chief of police. Mr. Phelan made this promise because he was under innumerable obligations to the "Examiner" and to Mr. Lawrence. But when Mr. Phelan approached the time for the fulfillment of the promise he found himself in a most embarrassing predicament, for at that time the dailies were in their normal state of war. Those that were hostile to the "Examiner" dared Mr. Phelan to perpetrate such an outrage as the turning over of the Police Department to the Hearst paper, and as a consequence Mr. Phelan's courage began to ooze. But Lawrence gave him frequent injections warranted to stimulate the heart's action and suggested the names of several distinguished citizens who, as police commissioners would appoint Esola and relieve him of all responsibility. Biggy was one of them. Biggy and Lawrence were very intimate friends. Biggy's success in politics was largely due to the backing of the "Examiner's" editor. But when it came to the election of Esola the pressure was too strong for Biggy's powers of resistance. The "Call" took a hand in the fight, and when Biggy turned against Esola it was suggested that he had been conquered by the Spreckels' family through the influence of his laundry. Howsoever that may be Phelan removed Biggy from the police commission, and they never spoke again until Biggy's friend Joe Dwyer placated all concerned at the time that the Graft Prosecution was in need of an Elisor. Of course if Judge Dunne had known of the life-long intimacy existing between Biggy and one of the attorneys for the prosecution he would have seen the impropriety of using Biggy as an Elisor to handle juries for the prosecution. But unquestionably Judge Dunne did not know. It would be unfair to assume that Judge Dunne appointed Biggy at the instigation of the prosecution. The appointment was simply the result of a happy inspiration.—Town Talk.

DISBARMENT SUGGESTED.

The Graft Prosecution thinks that Earl Rogers should be disbarred for intimating while examining the jurors in the Ford case that Mr. Heney and his associates are engaged in a conspiracy to get control of the city government for the purpose of unloading the Spring Valley's plant on the taxpayers. Not a bad idea. Indeed it would be a masterly stroke of strategy to disbar all the attorneys for the defense on some pretext. Whether the Supreme Court can be big-sticked into disbarring these attorneys I do not know, but of the prosecution's faith in the power of the big stick even when the assistance of the State's highest tribunal is desired we have had proof sufficient for my discriminating judgment. Of course Earl Rogers has much justification for inferring that there is a conspiracy on foot to unload the water works, not the least of the circumstances tending to such justification being that the project is now, it appears, being held in abeyance pending the election. Why it should be held over if all hands are assured of the popularity of the terms to be agreed upon I cannot conjecture. But there are other circumstances, not the least of which is the one of Mr. Heney's connection with the company. There is also the circumstance that Mr. Phelan is on terms of social intimacy with the president of the company, and that Mr. Phelan has of late appeared to have assumed a most radical change of front toward the corporation. These circumstances are not conclusive evidence of a conspiracy, but surely they will have greater weight with the average intelligence than those circumstances on which Mr. Heney based his conclusion expressed in open court that certain characters present were identified with the defense. But there has been no suggestion respecting the advisability of disbarring Mr. Heney. Perhaps the attorneys for the defense believe that with all the rope he is taking Mr. Heney is bound to commit self-disbarment, in the sense that his present conduct will have lasting effect on his future practice.—Town Talk.

THE RUEF PROBLEM.

Abe Ruef has become a vexatious problem to the politicians of the Graft Prosecution. Intent on perpetuating their control of the municipal government for purposes best known to themselves, they realize that it is not good politics to pamper their thrifty proteges from frogs' legs and ortolans at the expense of taxpayers up to the very day of election. They now see that their maneuvers in behalf of the unspeakable one have miscarried. Their systematic silence, broken by occasional sympathetic references to the penitent victim of temptation, their enthusiastic acknowledgments of indebtedness to the man by whom the higher-ups were brought within reach, these strokes of strategy have proved unsuccessful. The rehabilitation of Ruef is a task beyond the subtle powers of the prosecution. At any rate they have so far failed to abate popular prejudice sufficiently to induce acquiescence in the whitewashing of the infamous scoundrel by whom this city was debauched. The sentiment will not down that no greater outrage could be perpetrated than the contemplated coup of turning Ruef loose to fatten on the wages of his villainy while the victims of his greed are made to suffer the disgrace and torture of penal servitude. It was a fatal mistake to put the immoral idiot Schmitz in jail and vouchsafe the distinction of luxuriating like the sybarite of a harem to the man by whom he was seduced and shamelessly prostituted in defiance of public opinion. As time runs on and popular intelligence is coming out of the mesmerizing trance into which it was thrown, there are signs of the crystallization of a sentiment that is far from favorable to the plans of the prosecution. Ruef is beginning to loom up on the public vision in all the repellent ugliness of the Satanic figure which he cuts. The soft lights contrived for illusory effects are fading away and people are beginning to ask, "Is this hardened and depraved scoundrel of the vicious lecher the penitent sinner for whom our sympathy has been evoked?"—Town Talk.

INDELICATE WIT.

In club circles good-natured railery is often indulged to the point of indelicacy and painful embarrassment, and in consequence sensitive men suffer much mental anguish. There is a point beyond which banter should not go, but the wag, ever alert for an object of ridicule, like the practical joker, is no respecter of feelings. At the recent outing of the Family Club at Shasta Springs fresh illustration was given of the heedless drollery of the ingenious wag. A mock daily paper was printed and it created a deal of amusement, being filled with pungent witticisms dealing with the weaknesses and crotchets of members. Among other things there was a program of an imaginary entertainment at which papers were read, and Judge Lawlor was down for a paper on "Achievement." Incidentally, to him was attributed this sentiment, "Mine be the mob's applause." Now this may be very funny, but I submit that it was in poor taste, in almost as bad taste as that episode of a Bohemian Club jinks, the introduction of a jackass labeled Jimmy Phelan. Mr. Phelan is a man of some dignity, and the ease with which a man may be humiliated is in proportion to his dignity. Now dignity and the bench are inseparable and it must have been very painful to Judge Lawlor to be represented by his friends as being eager for the mob's applause. At this time, particularly, Judge Lawlor being engaged in the trial of cases that depend so much on public clamor, it was not in good taste to intimate that he craves vulgar applause. Coming from his friends such an imputation is more severely felt than it would have been if uttered by an enemy.—Town Talk.

SOME GROTESQUE THEATRICALS.

But while it has dawned on the intelligence of the political reformers that it is not good politics to pamper Ruef, it is no easy matter to solve the problem of how to propitiate the public without wounding the sensitive feelings of the exacting and fastidious prisoner. This prosperous Captain of Industry, who was equipped for his great career at our State University, is still a very important personage. Though a penitent he must not be expected to do penance. From the purchasable dailies, whose utterances are ex cathedra, we have learned that in Ruef's case repentance was a matter of agreement based on a consideration. While he was advised that no "lemon" would be accepted, that he must "come through" with more satisfactory testimony than he gave on his first appearance before the grand jury, he was obviously in a position to do a little dictating on his own account. And from the way in which he has been pampered ever since it is not unfair to infer that when negotiating with the gentlemen behind the prosecution his faculties were as keen as ever, and there was not a trick in sight that he failed to take. So there should be no surprise if the prosecution fail to do as we were told it would do when we were being prepared for the appointment of Biggy to his present job. We were told, it will be remembered, that with Biggy in charge of the city prison there would be no necessity of paying out two thousand dollars a month to keep the distinguished prisoner in a beautiful residence supplied with all the comforts of home. And when the work of impaneling the Ford jury was begun we were again told that Abe would have to go to jail. This time the significance of the statement was in its timeliness. It served as a notice to the jurors that it would be wrong for them to be influenced by the attitude of the prosecution toward Ruef. Judge Dunne gave varisemblance to the statement by announcing that he would not authorize the payment of any more bills for the maintenance of Ruef, and for as many as two hours it looked as though Abe would really have to go to jail. It was all like a beautiful theatrical performance, the climax of which was reached when Hawkshaw Burns came rushing on the scene, breathless and actually looking like a human detective bursting with startling intelligence.

"Rats!" shouted Burns, and Ruef was saved.—Town Talk.

THE INARTISTIC.

Now, purely from the standpoint of a dramatic critic, this entrance of Burns was had technique. There is nothing so important in the drama as suspense, and it should never be cut short. To cut it short is as bad as to prolong it to an unreasonable length. The entrance of Burns should have been deferred until the end of the Ford trial. The interim might have been neatly filled in with Ruef on the way to jail in his automobile, accidents en route, and a serious injury to Abe necessitating his return to his palatial quarters to be doctored by a great scientist hired by the people. Burns' cry of "Rats!" to say the least, was inartistic. He should have discovered nothing less than a case of bubonic plague. Rats are not a sufficient pretext for keeping Abe out of jail. Besides rats are vulgar, and may not be properly introduced in the political drama. Moreover, a serious and critical situation should never be marred by the introduction of an element conducive to laughter, and it is unquestionably to laugh when told that a supposedly great detective had detected the presence of rats in a jail. If he had discovered a jail without rats it would have been worth talking about. No well-regulated prison is ever without rats. Occasionally a prison is to be found without prisoners, but a prison without rats!—why it's inconceivable. It was also highly inartistic to raise the plea of rats in the case of Ruef while admitting that poor unfortunate wretches whose only weakness is a weakness for drink, or whose only bad habits are of a merely larcenous nature must endure the companionship of rats; and especially is the plea highly inartistic when one stops to consider that a rat infested prison is the best that we could expect in this city after it had been looted by Ruef. Any man with a keen sense of the dramatic would have seized the opportunity to captivate his audience with so fine a bit of retribution as the locking up of Ruef with a horde of rats in a prison of his own making.—Town Talk.

THE CLAQUE IN COURT.

Now we are told that the defense has a claque in Judge Lawlor's court! Well this appears to be the logical sequence of events. The importance of a claque was given most convincing demonstration during the closing hours of the Glass trial when the court room was packed like an honest box of sardines, and the windows were utilized as private boxes, and the jurors were almost crowded out of their chairs. But on that occasion the conduct of the mob made it quite apparent that the defense had been caught napping; that the latest trick in criminal court procedure peculiar to San Francisco had been taken by the other side. Surely if public clamor is a legitimate aid to justice under the present remarkable dispensation, the so-called higher-ups would be recklessly negligent of their rights to advise their sympathizers to make room for the supernumeraries of the prosecution. The situation is now pregnant with novelty as well as excitement. The spectacle of a contest in public clamor is something entirely new, and it is deserving of the very close attention of the Supreme Court, since it may give rise to brand new questions of law. Meanwhile the learned jurists of that tribunal, who have already publicly received hints of the advisability of adapting their rulings to the pleasure of public clamor, must be striving with great diligence to find some law upon which to deny the petition for a writ of prohibition. Imbued as they are with the spirit of reverence for the glorious traditions of their profession they must feel that it would be most discreditable to do aught that would hinder the course of justice that has been outlined in the criminal courts of this city. Being wise men they know that some day the history of all these proceedings will be calmly written and that no hero in the strife will be deprived of his panegyric, and no cowardly judge spared the obloquy that he earned for his memory.—Town Talk.

THE SPRECKELS MEMORY.

Something should be done to John W. Hutchinson Jr., the attorney who came all the way from Pennsylvania to bother the Hon. Claus Spreckels with impertinent queries about the Sugar Trust. Mr. Hutchinson is a meddlesome and an offensive individual. I suspect that he was imported by that arch-conspirator Patrick Calhoun, who must be more or less hostile to the Hon. Claus Spreckels for having urged his son Rudolph to purify the city. As we have been frequently told that the great sugar king authorized Rudolph to go as far as he liked with Spreckels' money in the great enterprise that has for its object the purging of this city of undesirable citizens, I am surprised that the omniscient Burns has not been employed to trace Hutchinson to Calhoun. Is it possible that the trolly magnate is not suspected of conspiring with Hutchinson? If Burns has not yet generated this suspicion then he must be losing his grip.—Town Talk.

THE SUGAR TRUST.

It is very unfortunate that Mr. Claus Spreckels should have been badgered by an attorney intent upon eliciting information of the aged millionaire's business affairs. Mr. Spreckels is entitled to the most amiable consideration. This I learn from a ponderous work in two volumes published by a Chicago printing house in 1892, which purports to be a history of "The Bay of San Francisco" and of the metropolis, more than half of which consists of write-ups of illustrious citizens, men distinguished in diverse activities from music teaching to capturing industries. Of Mr. Spreckels the author, who modestly conceals his name, says, "No other man of this century or any other, has by his own personal efforts, wrought such magnificent results through legitimate and highly honorable industrial enterprises. He prizes his honor as the apple of his eye." This was written before the Sugar Trust gobbled up Mr. Spreckels. Of the Sugar Trust the unknown author says: "In 1887 a Sugar Trust was formed in the Eastern States for the purpose of controlling the sugar refining business and through that the sugar market of the United States. A nominal capital of $50,000,000 was behind this combine and nearly all the refineries in the country were absorbed in it. Its promoters appealed to and labored with Mr. Spreckels to induce him to join it. Had they succeeded their object would have been accomplished, and the public would have been at their mercy. But in his personal independence in managing his own business and loyalty to the interests of the people, he positively declined to enter the trust. His refusal was a declaration of war in the sugar market. The trust thought to crush him, but they mistook their man."—Town Talk.

TUNNEL UNDER HARBOR.

There should be no opposition of any kind to the project for putting a tunnel under the Oakland Estuary near the point where street cars and local trains cross the two drawbridges on the way from Oakland to Alameda and vice versa. Traffic across the bridges is constantly increasing, and so is shipping in the estuary. In going from one town to another on the street car one cannot calculate within half an hour of the time of arrival. It is not uncommon to be held up for half an hour by a scow or a schooner passing through the bridge. This often happens during the rush hours and people are either too late for work, or what hurts them worse, late for dinner. The approach on either side of the estuary makes the tunnelling easy and cheap. This project was originally voiced in the News Letter immediately after the San Francisco fire.—News Letter.

BULLDOG FAD.

There is a fad in Oakland for wild-eyed, ugly faced bulldogs, the most ferocious and "scarey" the better.

As there is no mail delivered on Sunday, scores of people go to the general postoffice to obtain their mail in the noonday distribution. A goodly number of these people are from the near-by churches on their way home from morning services. Last Sunday, unfortunately, a gentleman owning one of these bulldogs stood in line waiting for his mail, with his dog by his side, when in came a fashionably attired young lady, leading a well-groomed, aristocratic black cocker spaniel, decorated with a huge bright-colored ribbon bow.

The bulldog turned its bloodshot eyes upon the spaniel as it entered, and an almost human look of sneer overspread its repulsive face, which might have been interpreted: "Ain't you a nice-looking sissy!" Then with a bound he grabbed the spaniel, and for five minutes there was a regular Britt-Gans fight on. The women screamed and the men were ready to flee, when a gentleman of military bearing pushed in with his cane and beat the bulldog until its hold on the frightened little dog was loosened. The owner of the vicious brute hurriedly left the building, and the spectators were thankful to the gentleman who had used his cane to such good advantage.

There has been considerable complaint of late on account of the crop of bulldogs that are seen unmuzzled on the public streets. It is said that they are the product of thoroughbred stock raised by a party near Berkeley for Oakland people, who pay fancy prices for them.

No one objects to them for watch dogs, and they are alright in their place, but their place is not in public buildings, nor in the business portion of a crowded city such as Oakland.—News Letter.

SNAKE MASTS SAVED SHIP AND REFORMED OLD SKIPPER

By Jack Wishaar

"Ever hear of snake masts on a vessel?" asked the old skipper as he methodically filled his pipe and smoked. "Never did? Well, that's not surprising, as I was the only one that ever used them. It happened this way:

"I was in command of the pretty little bark Edna M., and we were taking a load of animals from Calcutta to London for the London zoo. There were a number of lions and tigers and half a dozen pythons and boa constrictors in the consignment.

"We got them on board safely, and everything went well until we were off the African coast. We were caught in a gale which took the sticks out of the old ship. It blew so hard that it swept the deck clean, even our spare spars went overboard.

"The worst of it was that we were only a short distance from shore, and were rapidly drifting toward the rocks. We all knew that if once we struck there would be no hope for anyone on board. The crew started to pray, and the Hindoo who had been brought along to attend to the animals rushed up on deck. But the very sight of these Hindoos gave me an idea.

"I grabbed one of them and ordered him to bring up the biggest boa constrictor on board. This was a gigantic snake. He must have been fifty feet long and three feet around. When this big serpent was on deck I had the Hindoo hypnotize it, first stretching it along the deck. As soon as the hypnotic influence was felt by the serpent it became as rigid as a bar of iron. Then I had the crew set it up on end and lash it to stumps of the foremast, first putting on braces and stays to hold it in place. Then

I had the Hindoo hypnotize a smaller snake to be used as a yard, and this smaller snake was lashed across the big one about forty feet from the deck. To this snake-yard I bent a forest. With this jury rig I managed to work the ship off the rocks. As soon as the crew saw that we were saved they gave three cheers and worked like hell. Then I had the Hindoo get up two more of the big snakes for main and mizzen masts and also smaller ones to use as yards.

"Well, sir, these snake masts were just as good as the wooden ones. The only trouble was that the Hindoo had to give them a hypnotic dose every morning. But I had him do it, and with these snake masts we worked the ship clear around to London. The only accident that happened was just as we were entering the Thames. This morning the Hindoo had forgotten to give the serpents their accustomed dose of hypnotism. By this time we had those serpents looking just like masts. I had them painted, and there were rattles, stays, braces, and all the gear found on an ordinary mast and yard attached to them. I also had painted the snakes to make the fake masts look like the real things, as I didn't want it known how I had managed to work my vessel around.

"Well, as I said before, this morning the Hindoo forgot to give the serpents their accustomed dose, and just as we got opposite a big British battleship, the snakes came to life, collapsed and started to wiggle around the deck. The captain of the big warship when he saw the masts of a big ship collapse and start wiggling thought he had the jinx and swore off drinking.

"But I made a good run. That was about the most remarkable experience in my career at sea," and the old skipper smoked up.

not on the stage," came the answer, directly to the point.

"No; it's a funny thing." This answer was accompanied by an amused smile—"people always think I'm a native daughter, and I've lots of printed paragraphs in which the writers speak of me as one, but I'm not!"

"No? Where is your native place?"

"Michigan."

"Really? What part?"

The smile broadened into a laugh as Georgie Cooper pronounced the words, "From Kalamazoo."

"But," proceeded she, "I haven't been there in years. They tell me, though, that Kalamazoo is quite a place now."

"So I presume. You've spent most of your life here, in California, haven't you?"

"I suppose—" the reply came slowly, "I have. But I've traveled a great deal. With the single exception of Boston, I believe I've been in every big city and town in the United States—East, West, North or South."

"You come of theatrical people?"

An affirmative nod accompanied the answer. "On both my father's and my mother's side. My father was an old minstrel man. It was long ago that he abandoned that line, though. Of late years he has been connected with the stage more from a managerial standpoint until this winter. I notice he has been playing in stock at Portland, Oregon, this last winter."

"THEATRICAL FAMILY."

"You've a sister there, also, haven't you?"

"Two of them—Olive and Edith—and my mother also. I've a small brother, too, who has been playing."

It is quite evident that play acting "runs in the blood," so far as the Cooper family is concerned. Six in all, and each and every one of them on the stage. In addition, over in San Francisco lives a certain Mr. Woodthorpe, French to the very core; Georgie Cooper's maternal grandfather—a man who in his time has acted with many of the greatest of French tragedians, and who in himself has many an interesting tale to tell.

Old San Franciscans—they who love to tell of times now past, will remember the daughter of this old actor—Georgie Woodthorpe, now Mrs. Cooper—who was at one time a member of the old California stock company. That was in the days when Tom Keene started in that favorite place of amusement and she played Prince Arthur when he essayed King John. There was a sister, too, Edith Woodthorpe of San Francisco Tivoli fame. So, all things considered, it is but natural that Georgie Cooper should be regarded as a Native Daughter of California.

"I came here first," said she, "with Henry T. French's company in 'Little Lord Fauntleroy.' I was—let me see—about six years old at the time."

"Was that at the old Baldwin theater?"

"OLD COLUMBIA."

"No; Florence, Ethel and Nellie Palmer played there. I came later, when they took Wallie East. After that I came to this coast—Oh—many times. I was at the Columbia, years ago, when L. R. Stockwell ran it. And for several years we lived in Los Angeles. The

There were added "good mornings" and a few polite nothings.

"Have you had your breakfast?" asked Mrs. Stevens, regarding her daughter with a look of anxiety.

"No, don't want any," came the response, followed by a meeting of two pairs of eyes.

"Excuse me," murmured Georgie, crossing the room.

"Certainly," replied I, with averted eyes, and a half guilty feeling that the crucial moment of parting had come.

The feeling developed into a certainty when the air echoed a soft, explosive, vibrant in nature. I faced about once more as the gray overcoat and its owner disappeared from sight, and the interview with Georgie Cooper really began.

As a matter of fact, it never progressed much beyond the introductory stage, for I took quite long strictly to the point, to discover anything whatsoever about Mrs. Stevens.

"Really," said she, deprecatingly, "I don't like to talk about myself or tell about my early experiences. It always seems so childish."

"But," reminded I, "that's what an interview is for."

"I know, but"—the expressive pause which followed this rather non-committal and incomplete sentence, ended in a shrug of the shoulders and a crossing of two white hands adorned with innumerable false rings. Then I had to begin all over again.

"You've been on the stage practically all your life, haven't you?"

"ALWAYS ON STAGE."

"I can't remember the time when I was

JAPANESE GIRL FITTING FOR RELIGIOUS CAREER

A place in religious circles of Japan will soon be set aside for Miss Ochimi Okubo, a Japanese woman, who is to graduate from the Pacific Coast Theological Seminary in Berkeley, as an ordained minister, next year. She is the only Japanese to pursue a religious career for the purpose of establishing a religious mission in her native land.

MISS OCHIMI OKUBO,

toms of American schools she is rated as an exceptionally gifted scholar, and it may be said that she is deemed a superior product from the Mikado's empire, where she was educated at a modern high school at Tokyo, an institution for women. It was there that she received inspiration to pursue a religious career for the purpose of raising the standard of morality among the Japanese women, who, Miss Okubo contends, have been misunderstood. In the hope that the white fabric of Japanese social life will be better comprehended in America, she is laboring night and day for the cause of her own sex.

JAPANESE WOMEN.

From her earliest childhood she formed a love for religion and was ambitious to become a minister or a preacher of the Gospel.

She has worked toward this end by leading a life of devotion and self-abnegation. Like all other Japanese women she has been taught etiquette above all things, so that no rude action or speech would disgrace her rank, and that she would give due reverence to her superiors, courtesy to equals and polite consideration to inferiors. The unconscious and beautiful spirit of her youth has followed her throughout womanhood. She is pure, sweet and amiable, with great power of self-control. Instincts of honor and noblesse oblige are prominent in her character.

MIND ADVANCEMENT.

Miss Okubo is not entirely a student of other people's thoughts and sayings but original conceptions about men and characters. She is the editor-in-chief of a paper called "The White Ribbon Woman." It circulates among the Japanese women who are interested in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which was organized two years ago by Miss Hayashi, who visited the coast for the purpose of establishing the temperance society. The White Ribbon Woman is the official organ of this society and is edited in Japanese. It is the only Japanese woman's paper on the coast.

The paper is published once a month and in every edition an instructive lesson on temperance is given.

NEED OF WORKERS.

"It is clear that there is need for women workers in the spiritual world in Japan," said Miss Okubo in a recent interview with a TRIBUNE representative.

"I will work hard and soul for that cause. I have no definite idea as to where my work will be. I will go wherever I am needed. The women of Japan need a helping hand and I will endeavor to raise their standard of morality."

A great deal has been said about the Japanese woman's immorality, but all accusations are false and I am very indignant about this expression. There is nothing so noble as the Japanese woman in chastity. On the other hand there is a crushing immorality coming in and that is chastity is not required of the men. That is the base. Society has neglected to require a man to show his responsibility toward women. Men are required to display patriotism and manliness, but a great requisite and accomplishment is to be a beast on the other hand. Such a strange mixture. The Japanese women are not immoral. They have merely been misunderstood and depreciated."

Burbank theater was built for my father."

In brief, this is the sketch of her past, so briefly outlined by Georgie Cooper, at present a member of Ye Liberty stock company, in which company her husband, Landers Stevens, is leading man.

Mrs. Stevens is, possibly, the most versatile woman on the Western stage today. By preference a character actress, she can be relied upon in almost any emergency.

"I don't care to be a 'leading lady,'" said she, "nor do I like ingenue parts; neither do I like to play old women parts; there's plenty of time yet for that."

This explanation was accompanied by a glance at the white wrists and hands—"I can't play old women parts—my voice isn't suited to them."

"But when Nance O'Neill was here you did splendid work. Your part of the mother, in 'The Fires of St. John,' was one of the best things you ever did."

"You think so?"

"Indeed, yes."

ADMIRAL CRICHTON.

"I liked that part—very much"—continued the actress, referring to the drunken, thieving gypsy mother, who could no more resist her evil tendencies than could a magpie—"and I like the part of 'Twenny' in 'The Admiral Crichton.' You saw that play?"

"I did."

"And the part?"

"A good one—as you played it."

We talked a little, after that, of Dennis O'Sullivan and his very successful engagement here.

"Too bad," commented I, "that you were having your vacation then."

"It was my intention to have taken part in those plays," replied Georgie, who, in talking of her San Francisco experiences, had failed to mention a season at the new Tivoli; also the fact that she can sing as well as act—"But Mr. Bishop had said that I might take a vacation. Mr. Stevens had been promised his, and we wanted to spend it together. Mr. O'Sullivan didn't want to release me, but "It is so delightful to have a week off!" Mrs. Stevens drew a deep breath, and sank farther back among the cushions of her easy chair. "No rehearsals—no work. But I like to go to the theater anyway, and sit in front. It's lots of fun listening to the comments of the people about one."

It's a queer thing, but no actor or actress whom I have ever yet encountered, ever dreams of keeping a diary. Yet how intensely interesting would one be. Fanny Kemble, if memory serves me, did keep her desultory moments with a few short notes, most of them critical and derogatory of her own profession. But, written in a spirit of good will and that charity which "seeth no evil," how charming would the diary of any professional be.

Take Georgie Cooper, with all her life spent among stage folk—what a revelation might the pages be to those whose steps have followed beaten paths!

POLYTECHNIC HIGH SCHOOL COTILLION PLANS ARE READY

The Alumni Association of the Oakland Polytechnic High School is to commence the third season of its popular cotillion club on September 26th.

This alumni association represents a body of two hundred young men and women who believe that their interests in the alma mater should not cease with graduation, and the six years of the society's existence has been marked by unremitting interest in the work of the Polytechnic High School, and the promotion of its welfare.

The social side of this association, also, has never been neglected, and for most among its members, a cotillion has been built up, which, for the perfection of its conduct, the atmosphere of friendliness about the dances, and the unalloyed delight and enjoyment which the members have always experienced, has elevated the club into a class almost by itself. It has been characterized by a rare success, which may be partly due to some unusual features of its conduct.

Membership is limited to members of each dance has carried the evening along with a delightful smoothness and harmony. The club has a novel program, which is relieved from the monotonous waltz and two-step with the schottische, French minuet and gavotte. Care is taken in the selection of the musical program in advance, the aim being to insure unfailing variety and secure the best pieces for the various dances.

The Alumni has heretofore conducted five dances during the season, from October to February, but in view of the enthusiastic interest which this particular club has achieved, the officers deemed it a good idea to increase the number to six, and begin the season in September. The news has been received with great pleasure by the clubbers.

The cotillion is under the management of Mr. Golden L. Downing, '02, whose experience and ability should insure a season of rare enjoyment. Mr. Downing is assisted by A. W. Williams, '03, and a pick of the alumni committee of four young men chosen as the scene of the coming season's dances.

ARMY NOW WORRYING THE KAISER

Either Must Give Up His Fall Movements or Cause Farmers to Lose Part of Crops.

BY MALCOLM CLARKE.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—The Kaiser is in a dilemma. Within a few days he must decide whether to give up, at least in part, the great military fall maneuvers or cause the farmers of Germany to lose part of their crops.

The cold and wet summer, the arrival of which was delayed until the beginning of July, has delayed the harvest everywhere, and if the military maneuvers are to be held as usual, they will deprive the farmers of thousands of men at the very time they are most needed to harvest the not very large crops.

From all parts of the country come petitions to the government asking that the maneuvers be given up or at least postponed, or thousands of farmers will be ruined, so far as the Kaiser remains undecided.

It is thought that he will, however, follow the example of his northern neighbor, King Frederick VIII of Denmark, who, for the same reason, has canceled the Danish military maneuvers during this month.

I am informed by Mr. Dallin, president of the Hamburg-American line, that the report cabled from here to the effect that the company contemplated running a new line of steamers from Stettin via Copenhagen to New York has no foundation in fact.

The experiment was tried some years ago, but failed because of the hatred of Germany to the Scandinavian countries and the opposition of the Danish government that would not allow the Hamburg-American line to carry Danish emigrants.

The company will do everything to improve the service between Hamburg and New York and contemplate the building of two new turbine steamers, which are to surpass the Lusitania, of the Cunard line, as well in size as in speed.

TIME TO GET QUEEN'S AUTOGRAPH.

Here is an excellent opportunity for Americans who would care to receive a real royal autograph letter. Queen Elizabeth of Roumania, better known as Carmen Sylvia, is anxious to collect more funds for her asylum for the blind, which has room for thirty thousand people, and she announces now that to any one who will send her a donation, large or small, for the asylum, she will send a letter of thanks, written and signed by herself.

URAL GOLD TO HELP OUT RUSSIA.

The discovery of immensely rich gold fields in the Ural Mountains may help Russia out of the financial distress. The gold fields were discovered by an Orenburg merchant, Orekhov, who immediately notified the government at St. Petersburg, and was granted permission to mine such parts of the field as are on private property on the condition that he sell all gold found to the Imperial Mint at a fixed, very low price, the government to supply convicts to do the work.

Several hundred acres of the fields, however, are situated on state land, and the quartz is very rich in the precious metal. Many are the millions of rubles which will flow into the Imperial treasury at practically no cost—that is, if it does not disappear on the way into the capacious pockets of Grand Dukes and other officials.

GRAND DUKE'S POEMS ARE JUST OUT.

A booklet with the initials "C. R." (Constantine Romanoff), from the pen of the Imperial poet, Grand Duke Constantine, has appeared. It is entitled "Aphorisms" and contains some pungent criticism of Russian civilization. Some of it is in verse.

According to "C. R." Russians are never happy. "A Russian," says the Grand Duke, "has only one idea of happiness; that is, to admire enviously the happiness of others."

"In Russia clever men lack faith; fools have it superabundantly. Hence the clever men remain at the bottom; elsewhere they rise to the top."

"Tiresaucy is a very good machine if it is run by a very good engineer; our machine is all right—on paper—but the engineers are bad. What we want most of all is honest men who don't steal the oil."

"A Frenchman meeting a traveling friend asks: 'Have you enjoyed yourself?' A Russian invariably begins: 'Were you bored?'"

"Russian culture is like the sensitive plant; it shrinks at contact. I fear most our polished men."

"Those persons who regard our muzhiks as beasts of burden are themselves regarded by the muzhiks merely as beasts."

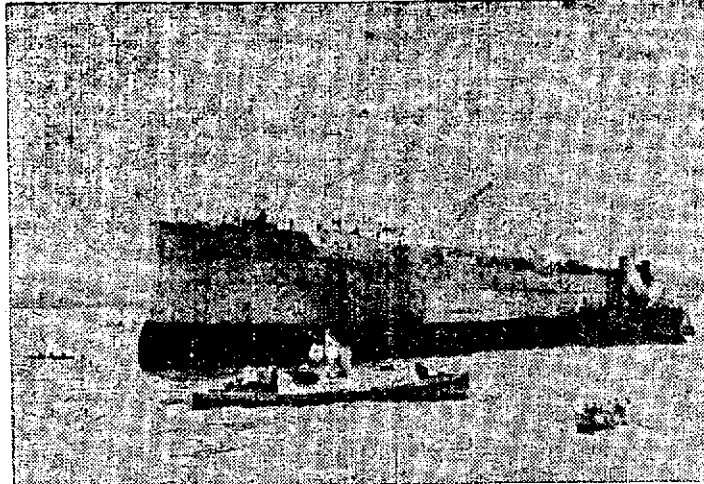

"We borrow too much from foreigners; what native originality we have goes abroad as interest."

Latest of the Monster War Vessels That Great Britain Is Strengthening Up Her Navy

(BY LUCIE WOLFF.)

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The British Fleet goes on from strength to strength—from the Dreadnought to the Bellerophon, from the Bellerophon to the Temeraire. Glorious names are these, every one of them, in our island story, but none is more glorious than that which has been given to the latest inheritor of the grand traditions of the "Fighting Temeraire." The new battleship which was launched last week at Devonport is the second of the improved Dreadnoughts. She will displace 18,600 tons, or 700 more than the Dreadnought, and is 490 feet long, 82 feet beam, with a draught of 27 feet. She will differ in outward appearance from the Dreadnought to some extent, as the small after-mast is missing, and the mainmast is brought abaft the after smokestack instead of being between the two funnels. Her armament will be heavier, the ten 12-inch guns being of a later mark, and the quick-firing guns of 4-inch calibre instead of 12-pounders. Of the two after turrets the first will be raised to the level of the forecastle to allow of the guns being fired directly astern over the aftermost pair, making a combined astern fire of eight guns instead of six in the Dreadnought. She will be the first ship in the Navy to have this disposition. With an indicated horse-power of 23,000, the Temeraire will have a speed of twenty-one knots.

The "Fighting Temeraire" is a household word throughout the Empire. She was "the Victory's companion in her closing strife"—to quote Ruskin. Turner saw her just below Greenwich being towed up the river one evening; and he went home full of a scheme to reproduce the scene on canvas. Thus he gave to the world a picture "of all pictures of subjects not involving human pain," says Ruskin, "the most pathetic that was ever painted." This Temeraire was launched in September, 1798, and was in her day one of the finest ships afloat. Of her prowess at Trafalgar, when she won her proud name, "The Fighting Temeraire," we need not speak here. "Crowned in the Trafalgar hour of trial with chief victory, prevailing over the fatal vessel that had given Nelson death—surely, if anything without a soul deserved honor or affection, we owed them here."

H. M. S. TEMERAIRE, THE NEW BATTLESHIP LAUNCHED LAST WEEK AT DEVONPORT.

What the future of our latest battleship may be is the secret of the gods; but whatever fate the new Temeraire will have to meet, the most patriotic student of the history of the British Navy may well be glad that, in spite of her historic name, she is hardly likely to find herself lying in the fighting line against the foe her predecessor met of old. Our gallant French friends know that we wish for nothing better than the continuance of the close friendship which now happily unites the two great Powers which have learned to respect each other during long centuries of a rivalry which once seemed destined to prove eternal. The photograph of the new Temeraire is by W. M. Crockett.

Credits American Girl With Business Activity Being Shown in Paris

BY PAUL VILLIERS.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—It is due to that enterprising and energetic American lady, Miss Charlotte Andrews, that Paris is beginning to lose her reputation of being the most unbusinesslike city in the world, with the possible exception of Constantinople. Special delivery stamps are a thing unknown, and letters marked "rush" travel at the enormous speed of one mile in five hours.

If a business man wanted to get a message delivered quickly, it was necessary for him to go to a cafe, order an abbatine and ask the proprietor to be kind enough to let him have the use of his "huntsman," who then delivered the letter quickly if he thought the tip would be large enough to justify haste.

Exasperated by the idea of doing business via the cafe route, Miss Andrews had an idea. She resolved to organize a system of boy messengers in Paris on the lines of those in New York and London, obtained permission from the government and set to work.

In a short space of time her first office was in working order. Other offices have followed, and the "petit messenger," in his smart gray suit and peaked cap, is now a familiar sight all over Paris.

He is rapidly becoming a popular favorite, is the "petit messenger," and I shall be very much surprised if he does not figure prominently in most of the revues this year.

places at Montmartre and the Latin Quarter are complaining that the class of Americans who are visiting the city is becoming more and more refined, to the detriment of their business.

"What is the use that the city is full of American tourists in even greater number than before," said the proprietor of a well-known establishment, to me, "when they spend their time at Louvres and Versailles?"

"A few years ago the average American tourist had barely arrived at his hotel, when he started out to 'faire les neiges,' or as they say in America, 'paint the town red.' Establishments like mine, L'Eleuter and Le Ciel, were filled with Americans all night spending money freely."

"Now they do not come, their taste has been improved, and the customers we get now are German delicatessen dealers, traveling with cheap 'personally conducted,' who think more of a franc than an American of a 100-franc bill."

"Unless there is a change, we shall all have to go out of business."

French lawmakers distrust physicians and lest these worthy gentlemen should be tempted to ship their patients too quickly into the hereafter a law was passed some years ago to the effect that a medical man may not benefit under the will of a patient whom he attends during the last illness.

This law may invalidate the will of Miss Susannah Margaret Coggers, a wealthy American lady, who recently died at Montpellier, leaving her large fortune to a local physician. Miss Coggers' two brothers have started suit to contest the will, but the doctor declares that as he was out of the city when the patient died he does not come under the provisions of the law.

PARIS GOSSIP More Cordiality Will Now Mark Relations Between Germans and Italians

BY MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—Of all the Italian diplomats the Marquis Visconti-Venosta is unanimously acknowledged to be the most capable. Having lately met his two young sons, I took the opportunity to ask them what was thought in their circles of the recent interview at Desio between the Austrian and Italian foreign ministers.

Here is what they told me: It had come to be recognized at the Ballplatz that the time had come to deal with questions arising between the kingdom of the Hapsburgs and the Italian monarchy with more cordially. It is true that one time Signor Prinetti had made it apparent that in Rome the Franko-Italian rapprochement was incompatible with the Triple Alliance, but Signor Tittoni tried to prove that the re-establishment of friendly relations between France and Italy did not need any immediate reply to this question.

In any case, in order to understand the importance in the change that had lately taken place in Italian foreign policy, it must be remembered that after the war of 1870 victorious Germany turned her attention toward the east.

Having acquired much greater importance by her Rhine conquest, she had become, as it were, a much bigger body in a too small garment. The Austrian and Italian monarchies understood perfectly well that Germany's increased importance could only take place at their expense.

Hence the rapprochement, which many did not understand, but the object of which did not escape the statesman who have just been in council at Desio. The groundwork has been laid for a new alliance destined to be born in a more or less near future out of the ashes of the present Triple Alliance, it being actually directed against the German empire.

The latter wishes sooner or later to find an opening as far as Trieste, and Austria and Italy have pointed out to her in covert but perfectly intelligible language that this will never be allowed. Thus spoke my two young friends, and the statement will doubtless cause joy to those who, like ourselves, consider it time to stop the Teutonic ambitions.

PRINCE/BORGHESE IS NOW COMING MAN.

Every season has its men, and the man of the summer of 1907 is without the slightest doubt Prince Scipione Borghese, who has just accomplished the splendid record of speed and endurance of the ride from Pekin to Paris. In sixty days he has covered by automobile thirteen thousand kilometres, crossing deserts where roads have never yet been traced.

It required immense energy and a rare adventurous spirit in a man to venture thus amid half savage populations who might at any time be tempted to demolish the infernal machine which was passing through their midst merely for the pleasure of seeing what it contained.

Prince Borghese is a descendant in direct line of the famous Prince Camille Borghese, who, in 1803, married the sister of Napoleon, and in 1805 followed his brother-in-law in the Austrian and Prussian campaigns. This Roman warrior has transmitted his indomitable qualities to his nephew, Prince Borghese is small and his ebony black eyebrows frame two piercing eyes which make him look more like a Sicilian brigand than an aristocrat, yet an aristocrat he is to the finger tips. He possesses an immense fortune, brought him as a dot by his wife, nee Ferrari, with which he bought back the palace at Rome which was the cradle of his family.

As is natural in one of his race he is one of the most active of the new Europe of Rome, which is astonishing Italy by its vitality and cleverness, exercised not only in the automobile industry, but also shown in the resurrection of its finances at the same time as that of its army and navy.

HOW THE FRENCH PEOPLE HAVE FUN.

M. Henri Lavedan, one of our most distinguished dramatic authors, has just published a book entitled "Le Bon Temps." "What is this good time?" Such is the question which has been asked of many distinguished people, eliciting replies which were serious, pedantic or picturesque. Only one of them was quite frank, that of Mr. Victorien Sardou.

"The good time," he said, "is that in which people leave you alone." To this reply, which is a little surly, I prefer that of another dramatic author, who says: "The good time is that in which one amuses one's self the most." Do we amuse ourselves now more than our fathers did? That is the question. They had swings, the "jou de bague" kites, aquatic sports, dancing and that is all.

As for us, we have also the swimmers through Paris, the weekly speeches of our ministers, aerial ascensions, cinematographs which show us railway accidents and the Pekin-Paris automobile race. We have all these, and diablo into the bargain. We ought, therefore, to be happy than our fathers were fifty years ago. In truth I do not doubt it, for I am certain the reader will reply with me to M. Henri Lavedan's question, "The good time is that in which we live."

TRANSPORTING BODY OF THE LATE LEO.

In consequence of recent events, the Pope has decided against the advice of those cardinals who insisted that a private but decorous form should be given to the funeral transport of the mortal remains of Leo XIII from St. Peter's to St. John, in Lateran.

It has, therefore, been settled that the body shall be transported at night, without previous notice or funeral accompaniments—indeed, almost in mystery. Solemn honors will be rendered to the dead Pontiff in the Lateran basilica.

The exact date of the removal has not yet been decided, but it is believed that before the end of the summer the remains of the great Pope will be placed in the magnificent Tadolini mausoleum at St. John's.

To Avoid Clashes Between Congregations Pope Will Suppress Several of Them

ROME, Sept. 21.—Pius X is going to make further economies in the administration of the church, and this time he will do so by suppressing several of the congregations or church administrative departments which have been in existence for several centuries. The congregations will not be entirely suppressed, but will be incorporated with others having charge of the same affairs.

Besides economical reasons Pius X has come to this decision because there were occasional clashes between the several congregations. For instance, the Congregation of the Council, which was established in order to solve all the questions arising from the interpretation of the decrees of the Council of Trent, has been at odds with the Congregation of the Propaganda and even with the office of the Cardinal Secretary of State many times during the past three centuries.

The Propaganda, which holds jurisdiction over all the missionary countries of the world, has for a long time claimed the right to rule these countries and impose upon the clergy and bishops the observance of the rules of the church. These rules the Congregation of the Council claimed to be the only authority in Rome fit to interpret, excepting, of course, the Pope himself. To this the officials of the Propaganda Congregation objected and many a time within the past three centuries disputes have occurred between the two congregations which were not settled until the Pope intervened.

Then there is the Dataria, which is supposed to confer all titles and honors in the name of the Pope. The Cardinal Secretary of the Briefs has long claimed the same rights, and so does now the office of the Cardinal Secretary of State. Because of this Pius X has found an easy solution of the trouble by amalgamating several of such departments, and thus saving a lot of money which was expended chiefly for the yearly salary of the employees.

Nearly all the Roman congregations, which are practically the ministerial departments of the church government, were established by Pope Gregory XIII, and are nineteen in number. Each congregation has charge of a special branch of the business of the church, and a cardinal titled as prefect presides over each. Several other cardinals form the executive committee in each congregation, and the vote of their majority is final in any deliberation they may take.

It is believed that when the plan of Pius X reducing the number of congregations goes into operation, the Italian administration will make a saving of about $100,000 a year.

"Let Your Wife Be," Says King Edward in Advising The Duke of Marlborough

LONDON, Sept. 21.—"Let your wife be, man, let her be. It would mean far more to her to be separated from your sons than it can mean to you."

So King Edward, first gentleman and first diplomat in Europe, advised the Duke of Marlborough, the other day. Lady Paget, who takes the deepest and most disinterested interest in the Duke and Duchess, has arranged that the King see the Duke several times. On the last occasion His Majesty talked most paternally to Marlborough about his unhappy family affairs.

Plainly the absence of his children, the Marquess of Blandford and Lord Ivor Churchill, hits the Duke hardest. He complained, almost bitterly, of it to his sovereign. He complained that the Duchess will yield nothing and insists upon having their boys in her constant care.

"Let her be, man, let her be," said the King, laying his hand on the Duke's shoulder. "Remember, she is a young, pretty and wealthy woman, without an occupation to divert her thoughts, and her martial affairs are all wrong. It would break her heart in no time were she left without her only consolation, which, at the moment, is the presence of the boys here, yours. Nevertheless, try with your mother's help, to get young Blandford off to some public school."

In the last words spoke the Englishman as well as the King. No matter how much woman, mother suffers, the future Duke of Marlborough must be English first of all. The Duke was Earl Fitzwilliams' guest for the Doncaster races this week. The fact caused some surprise, for, since his separation from his wife, Marlborough has been inclined to avoid any place where he might be brought in close but public contact with the King.

The Duke was invited to join the royal luncheon party at Doncaster on Wednesday. King Edward chatted with him about horses for a few minutes after luncheon, but took little notice of him otherwise.

"I Adore Music; I Detest Musicians," Is Essence of Interview Held With Blanche Marchesi, Prima Donna; Her Views on Singers and Taste of General Public

PARIS, Sept. 21.—"I adore music; I detest musicians. By what mysterious counterpoint does sublime harmony produce pettiness of soul?" This is the essence of an interview with Blanche Marchesi, the celebrated prima donna, today. A correspondent visited the songstress at the residence of her mother, Mme. Marchesi, who has cultivated the voices of so many artists. Blanche Marchesi will make a tour of America with the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York as her starting point. Plainly she and some other prima donnas are at daggers points.

"How strange it is, that the most fascinating of all arts should form, mold, create characters so despicable," she exclaimed. In the next breath: "Melba holds first place in the musical world, at the moment. Not is she likely to give knowingly to any rival, actual or prospective, the least chance to supplant her. But it is impossible for me to tell how greatly I admire Melba's voice. Perhaps there has been nothing like it in the whole history of music. Malbran, Jenny Lind, Patti are the only great singers of the same breath with Melba is not, but Calve has nothing between the voices of Patti and Melba. Patti's was like a thoroughbred racehorse, beautiful, fiery, throbbing with life, perfect of its kind. Melba's is like a rare beautiful bird, expanding its wings toward a wide, still, listening sky of exquisite blue."

Such was the praise forced by the artist, not the woman, from a woman and an artist who frankly confessed she dislikes Melba.

"Some of Melba's notes, yes, some of Melba's songs, seem to be diffused through my very being as she sings," exclaimed Mme. Marchesi. "I feel like demanding them again, and again. No other voice affects me like this. Calve is a great artist, which Melba is not, but Calve has nothing like Melba's great gift of voice. Emma Eames does not exist, compared to Melba."

Blanche Marchesi has studied most intently the history of operatic singing. Her room is adorned with pictures of great singers of the past whose roles she has studied, whose vocal methods she has examined so thoroughly that, she says, when she looks at their pictures she imagines she hears their voice. But, she thinks, the singers of bygone days had poor opinion of the songs they sang.

"Public taste in music has vastly improved, of course," she said, "and the most enlightened musical audience in the world is that in Boston. New York has some of the best musical critics, but the general audience there is so large that it is not as musical as Boston's."

Marchesi looks to America and Australia to produce the voices of the future. Among rising prima donnas she spoke especially of Elizabeth Parkins, whom she claims she launched in London.

"Parkins has been kept in second roles too long; no one can sing a better Mimì in 'La Bohème.'"

Of herself, Marchesi spoke little, saying simply: "I had great success, singing before Emperor William. They say when the Kaiser speaks to any one he primes himself beforehand with what he has to say. But he spoke to me of music, of art, of my mother's method in style. His Majesty is wonderfully well informed; most versatile; no one could have learned by heart such a lesson."

Americans Not Seeking Fashion's Rest Cures the Same as Does the King

BY PAUL LAMBETH.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Among Americans who are not following the King and taking cures which do not suit their constitutions at Marlborough, who are enjoying an ideal rest cure at the Villa Michia at Deauville.

According to letters received here the Duchess is looking younger, healthier and in better spirits than she has been for a long time. She spends the entire day out of doors with her two boys, one of whom, Lord Ivor Churchill, was at one time threatened with lung trouble.

Mrs. Borden Harriman, who was a complete wreck from nerves when she first arrived in London, is improving immensely at Deauville, where she is leading the simple life and living on the most frugal diet.

Another well-known New Yorker, Mrs. Richard Lounsbery, is nursing her husband at the house they have taken at Ascot. Mr. Lounsbery was another victim of the strenuous life, but he is recuperating among the Ascot pine woods and hopes to be as strong as ever when he makes his next appearance in Wall street.

GETTING FUN OUT OF SERIOUS LAW.

The passing of the deceased wife's estate bill, after efforts which have extended over forty years, has led to some amusing correspondence between country constituents and their representatives in Parliament.

It was, in fact, the standing joke before the prorogation of Parliament that a number of henpecked husbands wrote to members imploring them to explain the meaning of the act.

One of the letters, evidently from a very much bullied husband, contained the following query: "If my old woman dies must I marry her sister? Because, if so, I'd rather get a gun and leave the rest to the Coroner."

The opposition to this ancient bill by all the Bishops was regarded as a farce which will not raise the prestige of the church. It is an open secret that several of the Bishops who violently opposed the bill in the House of Lords were hoping in their hearts to see it passed.

COLIN'S ROWS WITH HIS NEW AUTHORS.

What is known as the middle class in London has had much to talk about since the great autumn drama, "The Sins of Society," was produced at Drury Lane. Arthur Collins, the artistic manager, had only allowed certain little details to leak out about the plot, but he had a nice "row" with the authors, Messrs. Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, concerning the ending of the play.

Mr. Hamilton, who is a very irascible individual, was determined that the lady villain should be adequately punished, but Mr. Collins insisted on a happy ending, and of course had his way.

It may be mentioned that one of the incidents in the play is the placing of lumps of coal in a box to take the place of diamonds. This, of course, is based on the recent case of Lord William Nevill, who is now suffering one year's imprisonment (his second conviction) for a fraud on a pawnbroker.

CROKER STILL IN THE BRITISH EYE.

Richard Croker scored another great victory by having gained permission to train his horses at Newmarket. Dr. McCabe, his trainer and turf adviser, is said to have been responsible for obtaining the necessary permit from the Jockey Club, which snubbed Mr. Croker so severely some time ago.

Britishers will do almost anything and forget almost anything in the case of a man who wins such a classical race as the Derby. Anyhow, Mr. Croker intends to bring at least half a dozen of his best horses to Newmarket, and his friends declare that before long he will be the principal figure on the British turf, which he was forced to quit for Irish ground.

There are hundreds of racing men who thought then Mr. Croker had been very shabbily treated, and who will welcome him back to the center of English racing. Mr. Croker is bitterly disappointed that his Derby winner, Orby, will not be able to compete for the great St. Leger race. Orby is suffering from an equine form of diabetes.

GARDEN PARTIES ALL WERE BIG FAILURES.

The present season, which has just ended in a glory of hail, rain and wind, has been a disastrous one socially. Save at the theater or some equally sheltered place, society has had few opportunities of casual meetings.

The garden party, which is such a feature of English summers, has been painfully wanting, for unless one was prepared to challenge influenza, lumbago, rheumatism and a host of other ills attendant on summer clothes and damp grass, promenade on the lawn was a dangerous practice, even on those rare occasions when the sun shone.

The result has been a terrible one for those who live out of society's merry-making. Great armies of waiters and waitresses are among the ranks of unemployed, for their services have been but rarely needed. The makers of marquee, the firm who hire out great quantities of silver and crockery, and, above all, the caterers, have all been the helpless losers of many thousands of pounds.

They have not done a tenth part of their customary business and more than one failure, which is directly traceable to the vagaries of weather, has already been notified. The season has, therefore, ended dismally, and money that should have been spent in England is, in a spirit of reaction, being spent like water in the southern cities of the Continent.

ROSIE BOOTE NOW TURNS TO DOG FAD.

The Marchioness of Headfort, formerly Miss Rosie Boote of the Gaiety Theater, has again been the popular favorite at the great Dublin Horse Show. Dressed very quietly in black and white, owing to the death of her husband's half-sister, she was not able to entertain, but she was, as usual, stared out of countenance by all those present.

No actress who has ever married into the peerage has become so really distinguished as the clever and tactful Rosie. The women who at first tried to snub her now grovel at her feet, for Lady Headfort, unlike the ordinary Gaiety girl, is gifted with wonderful wit and is far better educated than the majority of "smart women" in Dublin society.

She has taken lately to breeding valuable dogs, and has also become a very accomplished horsewoman. The marriage has in every way been a singularly happy one, and Lady Headfort is perfectly satisfied with a country life and has no desire to shine in London society.

She Spent Over Million for Entertainment of Royalty In Her New English Home

PRINCESS OF WALES.

PRINCE OF WALES.

DUCHESS OF ROXBURGHE.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Duchess of Roxburghe, formerly Miss May Goelet, of New York, has just bought a set of six emeralds which rank with the finest in the world. They compare with those of the royal family, and are much superior to any others in England. They are said to have cost her $250,000. Each stone is as large as a plum. This addition to her jewels—and she has the name of wearing more gems than any other woman in England—has swept her British competitors from the field. In the picture she is shown wearing $500,000 worth of jewels. The emerald shown is the exact size of them all. The duchess recently spent $1,500,000 to make her home attractive for the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales. She entertained on her new golf links.

EMPTY GUN FRIGHTENS FOOTPAD

ST. PETERSBURG, Stp. 21.—Prof. Kovalevsky, the Czar's principal body physician, was the hero of a startling and curious adventure a few days ago at Kislavodsk, where he is spending his holiday. He was sitting in the study waiting for visitors when a strange man entered and presented him with a paper which made a peremptory demand for 30,000 roubles. The professor handed the paper back, saying that even had he the money he would not give it to such a scoundrel.

"We shall see about that," said the robber, coolly, as he leveled a revolver at the professor's head. "Shall we?" replied the professor, drawing his pistol in turn. So the pair stood for at least two minutes. Then the robber slowly lowered his gun, smiled and said, "I'll do you no harm," as he backed out of the room and the house.

"But," asked a friend to whom the professor was relating the story, "why did you not accompany him to the door and give the alarm?" "I would probably have done so," he replied, nonchalantly, "had my revolver been loaded."

Holy War Is The Only Basis For Settlement

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—Only on the basis of the Jihad, or Holy War, can Morocco be reunited. The Right is for it, Rasuli wants nothing better, and now Mual Hadid has thrown in his lot with it. Abdul Aziz alone stands out against it. But how long will his resistance last? The European Powers, whose best friend he has been, will not and cannot assist him. Indeed, his misfortunes are due to his ill-judged and self-seeking interference. Suppose he were to come to the conclusion that it would be a safe course for him to join the popular cause? Nothing is more likely. It is certainly the only means of saving his throne. He is the legitimate Sovereign, the anointed Emir-el-Moumenin, and were he to raise the cry of "Death to the Glauzer!" he would rally round him all the Mollans and Sheikhs, the best fighting men of the Atlas, and at the same time would trump all his opponents' cards. This is the great peril in Morocco at the present moment, and it is a peril that may easily spread throughout Northern Africa. During the last twenty years the coming deliverance of Islam has been the burden of every sermon preached in the mosques of Northern Africa. The Faithful strain their eyes every day for a descendant of the Prophet, who will give the signal for the Jihad, which, as an old Waixir of the Atlas told a correspondent of the Standard some months ago, will unite all the Faithful. Abdul Aziz may well fulfil this hope. If he does, the conflagration will be tremendous.

KAISER HAS QUEER TASTE IN SCULPTURE

STATUE OF JUDITH.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—The Kaiser has his own peculiar taste in art, as in everything else, and this statue of Judith, which has just been awarded a gold medal at the Berlin Art Exhibition, is a striking example of the style of his taste in sculpture. By artists it is considered a little more robust than beautiful.

American Girl Won Beauty Contest Abroad

COUNTRESS D'ALLONVILLE.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—Countess d'Allonville, whose photograph is shown here, has begun suit against the Kaiser, from whom she hopes to recover twenty million marks. This viscountess claims to be a direct descendant of Count de Muenich, who loaned a sum of money to Frederick the Great in 1741. The amount of this loan, with interest, she says, ought to be paid to her by the Kaiser as a descendant of Frederick the Great.

American Girl Who Is In Center of Big Events

LONDON, Sept. 21.—It may be surmised that Sir Gerard Lowther's service as Secretary of Embassy at Washington was not altogether unconnected with his marriage. At any rate he married in 1905, on the eve of his departure for Tangier, Miss Alice Blight, one of the three prettiest daughters of Mr. Atherton Blight, an American gentleman of the best type, quiet, cultivated, and cosmopolitan. The bride was attended in American fashion by one maid of honor, her sister Evelyn, who has since married Mr. Mahlon Alanson Sanders.

Lady Lowther inherits the literary ability of her parents, and she has already shown in her "Diary in Morocco" that she possesses remarkable powers of observation and description. On her mother's side there is a strange artistic element derived from the Saltonstalls and Brewsters. The British Legation at Tangier, of which Lady Lowther makes so charming a chatelaine, is a large and comfortable but not very interesting-looking house. It stands just outside the town overlooking the market-place, and from the windows there is a magnificent view over the harbor.

LADY LOWTHER.

Priest Sold Antique and Is Arrested

ROME, Sept. 21.—The rector of a church near Naples was arrested for selling a magnificent fourteenth century baptismal font and the lid of an ancient tomb, beautifully carved, to a foreign collector for $800.

Pope Pius X has issued special instructions to all the priests of Italy that they shall take special care of objects of art, and not only prevent their disposal to dealers, but also see that they are kept in proper condition. However, notwithstanding the Pope's orders, several ancient objects of art have recently been missing from Italian churches, among which was a precious cope, more ancient and valuable than the one which was stolen at Ascoli and sold to J. P. Morgan.

The government has the matter under investigation and is determined to punish the guilty parties.

THE WHY AND WHEREFORE OF THE BIG WORLD

Two Great Streams of Stars as Part of a System Which Is Only a Speck in Illimitable Space

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The bustling little city of Leicester has been the scene of a very extraordinary gathering during these last days. The British Association met there and collected all those men and women who have given themselves to the study of the great "Why and wherefore of the world." There is something to me strangely pathetic about the infinite patience with which these great men are contented to plough slowly through the stupendous mass of difficulty which exact scientific research presents. The presidential address delivered by Sir David Gill, the distinguished astronomer, gave a picture of the needs of the scientific mind, which was in itself a great sermon. He showed how selfish and how humble a man must be who, by following in the wake of the progress made by those who preceded him and whose accumulated labors are his treasure house, sets himself to discover even one little patch of unknown ground and is contented with his own contribution to science. He presented a wonderful picture to his audience, which was an inspiration to those who heard it, of the great recent results of astronomical research, by patient and long-continued labor, in the sifting of numerical results.

A discovery has been made that a great part of space is occupied by two majestic streams of stars traveling in opposite directions. Accurate and minute measurement as to the distance of these stars and the cryptograms of their spectra have produced the amazing truth that the stars in both streams are alike in design, alike in chemical constitution and alike in the process of development, but whence these two great processions have come and whither they go none knows. "However vast the system to which they belong," said this great scientist, "that system is but a speck in illimitable space. May it not be but one of millions of such systems that pervade the infinite? Canst thou by searching find out God? Canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection?"

NOTHING IS BEING DONE IN CONGO.

Nothing puzzles the commonplace folk more than the fact that light has been let in upon the condition of the Congo, and yet nothing is done. Europe has faced the situation, and we believed that it was almost impossible for such a situation to be known to exist without a strong and practical protest, which would put an end to the evil. The case has been proved, none has been found to deny it. It has been put before England and it has been put before America. The evidence is clear, and yet everything goes on just as it did before. The details are so abominable that they can hardly be spoken of, and the reading of them is like cutting a wound in one's own heart. What is wrong? The whole system that can allow any people to go to a subject race, to force from them their rights of citizenship, the possession of their homes, the possession of their own beings. It is a great theft of which civilization is guilty. We—that is to say—the nations of Europe—go to a country as marauders, take from the people what is theirs, in order to bring money back to Europe, which is never spent again upon the country. There is no trade, there is no exchange. There is nothing but a system of open robbery, incompatible with Christianity, incompatible with civilization. It is a fiendish defiance of the moral standards which have been unanimously set up. If countries are to annex distant regions, and hold the people in subjection, it must be proved to all that it is for the benefit of those races, for the betterment of their condition, and not for their destruction and their degradation.

OTHER CONGRESSES IN ART AND SCIENCE.

Of conferences and gatherings there is no end. Cambridge has been the scene of the Esperanto Congress. At this time of the year usually the beautiful city is deserted and the streets are silent, for the undergraduate has forsaken the college squads, and the beautiful buildings lie wrapped in silence and slumber. But a thousand Esperantists arrived, and even an Esperanto vegetarian restaurant has been established. It is difficult to know why Esperantists are usually vegetarian, anti-vaccinationists and wear "rational" clothes. It seems to me equally difficult to believe why, if one wants to say "get it" in English, "Havu Gin" should be an expression likely to be understood by people of all nations. Indeed, in our country, in which the latter word is only too common, it might be greatly misunderstood even in teetotal circles.

An Esperanto service was held in the Church of Great St. Mary's and sermons have been preached in Esperanto. One of the striking features of the conference was the singing of the hymn, "Now Thank We All Our God," but it occurs to me that when we come to the first verse it would be better to have it in Latin, as I cannot help thinking it would be really more universally understood. In Esperanto it runs, "Nun, estu di laudata, per manoj, voĉoj, koroj!"

Workshop for Science Above The Cloud Limit

THE NEW INTERNATIONAL LABORATORY OF MONTE-ROSA.

THE NEW INTERNATIONAL LABORATORY ON MONTE-ROSA IS BUILT NEAR THE COL D'OLEN, 10,000 FEET ABOVE SEA LEVEL. IT CONTAINS A WELL-EQUIPPED LABORATORY. ON THE GROUND FLOOR ARE SEVENTEEN ROOMS FOR RESEARCH WORK. THE BRITISH, SWISS, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, AUSTRIAN AND AMERICAN GOVERNMENTS HAVE CONTRIBUTED TO THE EXPENSE OF THIS INTERESTING INSTITUTION, WHOSE BUSINESS WILL BE THE STUDY OF THE HIGH REGIONS OF THE ALPS.

LAUGH AT RECEPTION OF PRINCE

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—The German press and public are immensely amused over the American reception of Prince Wilhelm of Sweden.

"Americans may laugh at us for our antiquated ways, but thank God, we do not make such exhibitions of ourselves as a Prince in Berlin," exclaims one writer, echoing public opinion.

"Royal princes are seen on the streets daily. No one bothers about them. But when a prince crosses the Atlantic to the land of democracy and freedom to all men, his steps are dogged by enthusiastic republican royalists waiting for his smile. They follow him with kodaks and publish photographs of his most intimate actions. Society leaders battle like cats for the honor of dining him and showing him to rival cats as they drive him in their carriage."

"If this be democracy, then give me monarchism," instead. On this side of the Atlantic, we frankly and simply bow our necks to the royal yoke. American people get rid of cant and pharisaism! Honestly say that you admire Prince Wilhelm of Sweden more than we do in Europe."

To Idealize Crime Is the Prevailing Fad

(BY LADY VIOLET GREVILLE.)

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Books, newspapers and plays nowadays, we with each other in discussing, admiring and idealizing crime. Some sordid murder for the purpose of greed fills an entirely disproportionate place in the daily journals, to the detriment of the record of humanitarian efforts or the great political and social problems. Some of the daily papers resemble the police news in their headings, and a sensational novel dealing with all kinds of fraud and robbery finds laudation as a masterpiece. The glorification of crime used to be reserved for the penny dreadfuls, which led many a boy into evil ways as he gazed over the daring deeds of the famous highwaymen of old, Dick Turpin and Jack Sheppard. But these at least rode and fought and delivered damsels in distress, and did much that was heroic and generous, meeting their death with a dashing courage and gaiety which could not fail to elicit admiration. The crimes of today are sordid, mercenary and brutal. An unfortunate woman is murdered for her jewelry, an old man supposed to be a miser is killed remorselessly for a few shillings; the circumstances are horrible, the murders commonplace. Most healthy minds do not care for, and would gladly be delivered from, such nauseous details. How many criminals, indeed, may date their first essay in crime from the circumstantial account of a great jewel robbery, or the details of a poisoning case? No good can come of publishing the stories of crimes, and much good would be done by suppressing them in the interests of the public.

Would Make Britons All Early Risers

LONDON, Sept. 21.—President Wright of the British Watch and Clockmakers' Guild has undertaken to transform the English into a nation of early risers. At the annual meeting he proposed the simple expedient of putting forward all clocks one hour, so that noon should fall at 11 instead of 12. Thus, every one would go to bed and rise one hour earlier than at present. Many objections to the scheme were raised, on the score of the enormous difficulties to be overcome in upsetting the basis on which all astronomical and other calculations were made. Though the president bethought these obstacles, the Guild refused to pass his measure.

OLD MADE YOUNG AGAIN BY ORIGINAL SYSTEM OF EXERCISING WHILE IN BED

Unique Method Described in Handsome Volume Written by Citizen of Alameda

"Exercising in Bed," is the title of an interesting and original volume written by Sanford Bennett, of Alameda, and the work issued by the Edward Hilton Company, of San Francisco. Think of a man old eleven years ago, and now at the age of 67 "young" and vigorous as one well preserved at 40, and you have a picture of Author Bennett, and what his book stands for.

The author states that such exercise, under the most comfortable circumstances possible; that is, in bed, is a novel idea and a step in advance in the most important of all sciences, the science of health, strength, elasticity of body, and longevity.

AT SMALL EXPENSE.
The small expense of the four simple aids or devices used, and the ease with which the exercises may be performed will invite a trial by anyone who looks through the volume.

The most vital thing connected with the system is that the author claims any man past 50 years of age, old for his age and physically weak and with flabby muscles, may be rejuvenated, as he himself has been, by the exercises as directed and explained.

To prove this the author submits two reports of a physician who examined him, the last examination occurring eleven years later, or after Bennett had been putting his physical being through his system of exercising in bed.

FIRST REPORT

Dr. Carl Renz, of San Francisco, made the examinations and kept the records. The physician says:

The physician says: "When I commenced these periodical examinations, Mr. Bennett reported that I should keep a careful record of any changes in his physical conditions which I might detect, explaining that he had devised a system of muscular contractions and alternate relaxations, which he practiced as he lay in bed, and which he believed would eliminate the worn-out or dead and clogging cellular tissue, hoping that in this way he could rejuvenate his body, which at that period exhibited the conditions usual after the fiftieth year has been passed. His gen-

"The outlines of his first record are: height, 5 feet 6 inches; weight, 136 pounds; abdomen, with decided embolpoint; skin, sallow; neck, 14 inches; skin, point, hair, short, steel, 14 inches, small, around throat, hanging loose; legs, well developed; arm muscles, atrophied and flabby from lack of exercise; forehead, deeply lined; hair, thin, dark, streaked with gray on crown, quite bald; chest expansion, 3 inches, symptoms of Arteriosclerosis slightly developed; hearing and eyesight, good; size of liver, normal; heart, normal dimensions, no valvular lesion; pulse, about 76, not quite regular; lungs, normal; complains of chronic dys-

organs, skin, hair, and generally the health of the subject, who really seems to be rejuvenated. The hair, now gray, has become quite luxuriant, no indications of former baldness; the neck, increased to 15 inches, smooth and very muscular, in appearance, the neck of a young man; throat, full; skin at this point no longer loose and flapping, but firm; chin and neck muscles of face, smooth, clear, excellent; appearance of the face, that of a healthy, well preserved man of forty or less, the lines which formerly existed have disappeared; the development of the arms, chest, back, shoulders, and abdominal muscles creditable for an athlete of thirty; heart, sound, no palpitation or irregularity of pulse; chest expansion, 34 inches, waist, 25 inches; no fat around the abdomen; digestion good. "There is a remarkable preservation of tissue integrity and functional activity; the subject has now entered his 68th year, and has all the elasticity and appearance of a young man."

Under these favorable physical conditions, it would be pure speculation to hazard an opinion as to the probable future span of life. The record of my examinations shows: a steady improvement of the subject at an age when such improvement is very unusual; this condition seeming to be due solely to the systematic method of muscular contractions and alternate relaxations which he daily practices."

QUESTION OF SUCCESS.

"I have now described, as fully and clearly as I am capable of doing the clearly as I am capable of doing, these methods by which I have accomplished my physical rejuvenation, and why such a condition as mine, at sixty-seven, is possible by the system I practice. There is no question of my success, and I know the same satisfactory results are possible for any one who will follow my example,—but will you do so? The majority will say, "That man has some good ideas," and add, "I feel that I do need a method—local system of exercise, and when I have time I may take this up.' You might as well say you have no time to eat or sleep. You can't be healthy, unless you exercise. Health should be your first consideration. Financial success and other things are of secondary importance; for with health, strength, and elasticity of body the chances of financial success are greatly increased. Without these attributes, the greatest financial success is of but little value.

ONLY ONE RESULT

ONLY ONE RESULT.
"How many of our brain workers—

our business and professional men—have sacrificed health and happiness by following the paradox, I am too busy—I haven't time to take care of my health? There is only one result to a life upon these lines—an early breakdown is inevitably certain. It is true that many have accomplished great wealth in exchange for their health, but have spent that wealth in vainly endeavoring to regain their former, but now wasted, physical vigor.

"I don't deny financial success. Wealth

TWO SUITORS FOR ONE GIRL

CHICOPEE, Mass., Sept. 21.—By an unexpected turn in her involved love affairs Miss Ida Munn, the 17-year-old miss who was brought into court because she refused to marry the man of her mother's choice, had two suitors upon her hands, and lost both of them.

Miss Munn's mother had picked out Israel Meinick, 15 years old, of Springfield, as a desirable life partner for her daughter, who had strong preferences of her own and had promised to marry Philip Stacy. The earliest solution of the situation appeared to Miss Munn to be to receive the attentions of both young men. Meinick called to her home, a privilege Stacy was denied, and Miss Munn met Stacy clandestinely in Springfield, a proceeding which added spice to the romance in the eyes of both Miss Munn and Stacy.

The court incident wrought a complete change in the matrimonial horoscope of the three young people. Meinick had not the slightest suspicion that his intended had predilections in another direction, while Stacy was dumfounded to learn that Miss Munn had often protested is a very good thing to have; but the greatest financial success will not compensate for ill health. Better stop now, before it is too late, and take the time to make yourself strong; for otherwise you may be forced to attend your own funeral, brought about prematurely by lack of muscular activity and other violations of the laws of Nature.

ANOTHER OBJECTION

ANOTHER OBJECTION.

"Another objection often raised is, 'I am too old.' To this I have already made my answer. If I, a chronic dyspeptic at fifty, with adverse hereditary and physical conditions and unfavorable environments, have been able, by the simple methods I have described, to build myself up and to acquire the strength, elasticity of body, and vital energy I now possess, you had better try the described method, then you, too, can surely have the same success. You are not too old. Try it. Commence now, and you will succeed.

"Too much trouble"—that is the objection of a lazy person. If, by the same exertions for one year, you could be assured that you would receive $50,000, you would not think that too much trouble, but would esteem it the opportunity of your life. Yet the health and improved physical condition, which would surely result from one year's systematic and persistent practice of the methods her undying devotion to Meinick.

The rival suitors established a truce, met on neutral ground and compared notes. The result is that Miss Munn, who has been practically disowned by her mother, is very much alone in the world. Last week Miss Munn was brought into the police court on the unusual charge of being a stubborn child. Her mother, who was the complainant, stated that her daughter's stubbornness consisted in her refusal to marry Meinhick, who is a Hebrew, the faith of Miss Munn and her mother, while Stacy is a Gentile and a Protestant.

Stacy was in court with a marriage license, which he said he procured with his parents' permission. In ordering the case continued indefinitely the court in effect refused to entertain a charge against Miss Munn. The young woman's victory seems to have been dearly bought in view of subsequent developments. Meinelck is especially incensed, while his father, a wealthy Worcester merchant, had promised to do the handsome thing in a financial way, provided Meinelck married the "right girl."

I have described, could not be purchased for that or any other sum.

REWARD IS HEALTH.

"It is true that to be in the best physical condition does not require undivided attention; but the end is worth the means, for the reward is health, strength, elasticity of body, and longevity, the real, the greatest, riches in the world. Just as engineers and expert machinists, employed to care for the intricate machinery of a great ocean steamship, are forever polishing up and looking after the various details of that machinery, that they may have the highest efficiency; so the complicated machinery of the human body must be assiduously and intelligently cared for, or it will surely deteriorate.

"There is no royal road to health. It cannot be bought; if you would possess it, you must work for it.

"But the way is easy, the work not hard. As you lie comfortably in bed to-morrow morning, commence the practice of any one of the muscular contractions and relaxations I have described, and when you have learned that, take up the next. Finally you will have acquired the entire system, when you will find to be an easy, certain, and inexpensive method of acquiring health."

The book is dedicated to the author's friend and companion on many hunting trips, Al Fisher.

'PRINCE OF PILSEN' WILL OPEN AT MACDONOUGH

Orpheum to Open Its Doors in One Week; Many New Bills at the Local Theaters.

Prettily jolly, adorable and distinctly chic is Miss Lawson as Sidonie, the demurely naughty little French maid in Mr. Henry W. Stange's new production of Pilsen, that is to be seen on September 23, 24, 25, at the Macdonough. This dainty young miss whose success in vaudeville last season induced Mr. Stange to offer her the part created by the talented Jeanette Bagard in his reconstruction of the cast for the present season is one of those arch, gifted and mischievous sweet girls who are alive with temperamental charm and natural, adorable grace. Her dancing in the second act is a real source of enjoyment and her slinging naïve and elegant attractions. There has not been such another little and gifted personage peer over the horizon of the stage since the Bagard original. Miss Lawson is a beauty—dark and delicious and delicious—her costumes are all dreams. Take the one she wears in the whirlwind dance with the confectioner. It is a masterpiece without doubt one of the most exquisite fancies of Archie Gunn, partially pictured after a poster by the French artist D'Orville. It is a study in dove-colored, gracefully graduated and trimmed with a perfect touch of green, red and white. There are billows upon billows of lace which swirl and swirl in undulation as the little blonde moves in the very poetry of motion. There is a slight trimming of black velvet with here and there a touch of pink, the most delicate hue to enhance the color.

as pervades the story is familiar as rain and sunshine and will be welcome as both. The "Three of Us" may be said to be a faithful picture of real American life. Every character we are told, is true in its sketching, every line seems measured with grace, diction and verity and there is that staunch, persistent spirit of national plainness and independence which no one of the American plays, not even those of greater literary fancy and picturesque have been able to touch.

THE ORPHEUM.

A large event in the history of theatricals in Oakland is scheduled to occur a week from next Monday evening, when the new Oakland Orpheum will open its doors, and that will be the beginning of the "Advanced Vaudeville" in Oakland, under the banners of the Orpheum Circuit Company.

Nearly a half million dollars has been invested by the Orpheum magnates in their new Oakland theater, the playhouse being situated in the heart of the town, at 12th and Clay streets, on land that is valuable as business property, and the building itself representing an expenditure of a fortune.

At the skill and genius and wealth of the Orpheum company, with the experience of many years in the catering to millions of theater goers, has been available in the planning of the Oakland Orpheum. The result is that Oakland now has a high-grade vaudeville theater as fine as any in the west, perfectly adapted

The opening bill will be a typical Orpheum bill. It will be well balanced, brightly toothsome, abounding in light and color and song and fun and some of the poetry of a stage that has done big vaudeville acts, and a set of Orpheum moving pictures to top off the feast. Each of the acts will be a brilliant gem in a collection of brilliants. There will be sketches full of fun and wit; music that will charm, beautiful scenic effects and novel arrangements of dancers and singers; rag time, minstrel, clever clowning from Europe; and perfect stage management throughout.

The Orpheum is to give a matinee at 2:15 o'clock every day in the week and a performance every night at 8:15. The same shows and the same prices as in San Francisco will be the slogan of the Oakland Orpheum. The box office will open at 9 o'clock Thursday, September 26th.

IDORA PARK.

"Ship Ahoy" is a smashing and entertaining large crowd at the cozy Idora Opera House and is proving one of the most popular attractions ever offered by the splendid company. It is only when we hear some of the high priced traveling companies that we realize what a splendid little organization our home opera company really is. Ship Ahoy is one continual feast of fun and good music and could easily run a month, but Manager Bishop will adhere to his policy of frequent change so after one more week of the musical comedy we are promised a superb production of "Rip Van Winkle," a charming musical setting of Washington Irving's immortal legend of the Catskills by Robert Planquette, composed of the "Chimes of Normandy." The music is of the very highest class and the work is indeed a work of a modern romantic opera than a comic one although a strong vein of humor pervades the entire work. As the lovable vaudeville "Ship Ahoy" will again have one of those straight character roles in which he possibly shines and a special treat will be the orchestral music under Steindorff's able direction.

This afternoon at half past five Prof. Hamilton will make a balloon ascension, descending by means of a parachute.

YE LIBERTY PLAYHOUSE.

"Too Much Johnson" has provided Oakland theatergoers with an excellent week's amusement at the Liberty Playhouse this week, where it has kept large audiences in an uproar of laughter every night. This clever comedy will be presented for the last time this afternoon and evening and anyone who enjoys a good laugh should not miss seeing it.

Monday evening next the Liberty has been given up by their Orchestra Club of Oakland, who will give their first concert of the season. It is one of three concerts the club gives each year and the usual tickets can be secured through members of the club only.

In consequence of a concert, "The Dancing Girl" the play to be produced at the Liberty next week, will open its run Tuesday evening but will continue for the rest of the week and at the regular Saturday and Sunday matinees.

"The Dancing Girl" is a play of modern life in four acts written by Henry Arthur Jones, the distinguished English playwright whose dramatic history is almost as well-known to American theatergoers as it is in England. He is responsible for such brilliant successes as "The Liars," "Mrs. Dane's Defense," "The Masqueraders," "The Middleman," "The Hypocrite" and many other too numerous to mention, and is now directing the final rehearsals of "The Dancing Girl," which is to open next week at one of the leading theaters in New York City.

All of Henry Arthur Jones' plays are the result of careful thought and study, are extremely interesting and appeal to every class of theatergoer. The story of "The Dancing Girl" is a masterpiece of wit and subjects in a masterful way.

For the week commencing Monday, September 30th, Manager Bishop has an unusual play to offer his Liberty patrons in "The Love Route," which turned out to be the most popular play produced in New York last season. It was written by Edward G. Ross and is a comedy in the building of a new railroad through Texas and the determined fight waged by one ranchman to keep her property. The big scene in the play shows a gang of workers laying the rails and the men who are to be the most realistic effect ever tried on the stage. The Liberty management have secured a most excellent production of the play and intend to make the production of "The Love Route" the most elaborate and complete ever seen in Oakland.

SVENGALE, THE HYPNOTIST.

Owing to extensive requests from all over the city Manager Smith of the Novelty Theater has arranged to have the celebrated hypnotist and telepathist, Svenvale, who but a few weeks ago at the same theater created so much talk and laughter. This same man is without doubt the best of his kind in the world and will only be too glad of an opportunity of seeing him again. Last time he put a subject to sleep in a store win-

GREEK THEATER COMMITTEE.

The University orchestra, under the direction of J. Fred Wolfe, will give Tschaiakowsky's fifth symphony concert in the Greek Theater on Thursday afternoon, September 26. By many the fifth symphony is considered superior to the famous "Pathétique," and the admirers of that wonderful composition, whose name is legion, should be interested in hearing a symphonic work by Tschaiakowsky that is not less admirable though less frequently heard. His fifth symphony is known in part to many through the beautiful second movement, and also the scherzo, which like the others for string quartet is familiar to music lovers who have not heard the compositions in their entirety. The concert on Thursday will give such an opportunity in the case of the symphony, to a great many who are eager to add this important work by the Russian composer to their musical experiences.

Another item of peculiar interest is fragments from the opera "Casta and Pollux" by Rimsky, a most significant figure in musical history, although his compositions are rarely heard nowadays, particularly in orchestra. Rimsky flourished in France in the early nineteenth century, this antecedent, Cluck as a composer of opera. His "Casta and Pollux," from which five dances are to be played on Thursday is accepted by musical men as his masterpiece. The other numbers on the program are the "Mission" overture of Ambrose Thomas and Liszt's symphonic poem "Les Preludes." The concert will be given at the next concert, on October 1st, and on the Thursday following, October 3rd.

17, Mme. Gadsdill will be heard in a song recital with the University orchestra.

THE COLUMBIA.

"The Telephone Girl," which will be the last of the musical comedies to be presented at the Columbia Theater, will run for another week, and judging from the success which the popular comedy displayed during the latter part of last week, the management should play to crowded houses every night.

Sybil Page, in "The Telephone Girl," is making her farewell appearance to an Oakland audience, and her many friends will, no doubt, be on hand to witness her last appearance.

The bill is one of the best that has been presented to the Oakland theatergoers for some time, and with Sidman as Hans Nix, the inspector of telephones, Len T. Dillon, and Anna Clarke, the cast is exceptionally strong. Sidman, in the role of the burlesque of the Tenth street playhouse, has been engaged as the leading man and a company equally as strong has been signed.

The following week the Columbia management will open with their own stock company, in "Jim the Westerner." Will Walling has been engaged as the leading man and a company equally as strong has been signed.

It is the intention of the management to put on all the very best drama that is being staged in America, and the scenery and properties are now being prepared for the opening night.

or effect. Miss Lawson herself says: "I dress myself in the same simple, clean, and simple. I try to win them. The man never enters my head. Win the woman and your battle is won. I study my lingerie as I do my gospel and in all try to be daintily chic. This I learned while studying to be a danseuse assistant under Bertrand, the dear old master of ballet of the Grand Opera at Paris."

"THE THREE OF US."

The next attraction at the Macdonough, week of September 28, will be "The Three of Us," which Mr. Walter N. Lawrence produced and ran the whole season at the Macdonough Theater, New York, a throng of enthusiastic people.

"The Three of Us," we are assured, upon follows of the new light playhouse, the most brilliant dramatic literary event the American stage has embraced for a long time.

To be sure there are many good, fine, breezy dramas of American life swinging along achieving success, but this gentle, candid, genuine and heart-throbbing story plays in its simple port, its superb ethics, its charm and consciousness, is queen of the mail and was written by Rachel Crothers, who has a rare and rare. There are no cow boys, no guns, no Mexicans, no frenzied finance nor just plain, homely, pulsing reality, American to the core, all sentiment and a good deal of the sort of grave romance belonging to a primitive and cordial era.

Love unbounded, tender, old-fashioned, brave, love is the essence of the play. Not wild, avid passion, not frantically problematical emotional fancy nor animal abandon. Only kind, courageous, prophetic love, a sister, a sweetheart, a rival and a friend who are calm and calm and calm at the stars.

to the purposes of any theatrical organization, it is a masterpiece of wit and subjects in a masterful way.

MANY GUESTS PRESENT AT BEAUTIFUL WEDDING

MR. AND MRS. C. H. HUNT.

Bridal Party Then Journeys to Santa Cruz

A very interesting and beautiful wedding took place last Sunday, September 15, at Point Richmond. Ella, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Parks, was united to Charles H. Hunt at the residence of the bride's parents, The Leathers. The Rev. G. T. Baker, rector of the Episcopal Church, officiated.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white silk, trimmed with white lace, and carried a bouquet of white carnations.

The bridesmaid, Miss Lily Parks, wore a pretty gown of white mull, trimmed with Valenciennes lace, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

AMID BLOOMS.

The ceremony was performed in the spacious parlors and the floral effect of white and green and a large wedding bell, composed of white roses, white sweet peas and anemone hair ferns, suspended over the altar was beautiful in the extreme. As the bride entered, leaning on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march, played by Mrs. F. Billington, the guests arose and remained standing while the solemn words were spoken which made them one.

Immediately afterwards Mrs. G. T. Baker sang with great expression and taste "O Promise Me."

The guests then marched to the large dining room, which was beautifully decorated, red and green being the predominating colors, where a bountiful supper was served. The happy couple were the recipients of many beautiful and costly presents.

After supper the bride and groom departed for Santa Cruz amid showers of rice and good wishes for their future welfare and happiness.

DRUMMERS PROTEST TO RAILROAD COMMISSION

OMAHA (Neb.), Sept. 21.—The Travelers' Protective Association today filed complaint with the Nebraska Railroad Commission against the Union Pacific Railroad, charging that road with refusing to haul any but personal baggage on overland limited trains, and asking that the road be ordered to place chair cars on the overland and Los Angeles limited trains so that local passengers will not be forced to purchase Pullman seats.

The attention of the commission is also called to the "deplorable indifference and impudence of agents and operators along the line," and the association cites numerous instances to back up the contentions.

RUSSIAN GRAIN CROP SMALLER THAN USUAL

ST. PETERSBURG, September 21.—The crop report of the central statistical committee, published today, records that the expectation of a fine crop have been signally disappointed and that high prices of grain assured the only relieving feature of the situation. ## BIG GAINS FOR HARRIMAN LINE

Enough Business Now in Sight to Break All Past Records.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—In such a prosperous condition is California, together with other territory tributary to the Southern and Union Pacific systems that Mr. Harriman and his chief officials, like Stubbs, Kruttschnitt and Calvin, are said to be of the opinion that for the last four months of this year those two roads will do the heaviest business in their history.

Beyond the first of the year it is not easy to see, but a careful survey of the traffic situation in the West indicates, they say, that there is enough business in sight in the next four months to bring the earnings of the two lines away ahead of the record made in the first six months of the past fiscal year, that is from June 1 to December 1, 1906.

From a rough estimate of the traffic situation it is their opinion that the Union Pacific in the first six months of the current fiscal year, that is between June 1 and December 1, will earn about 10 1/2 per cent on its common stock, or enough to pay a full year's dividend.

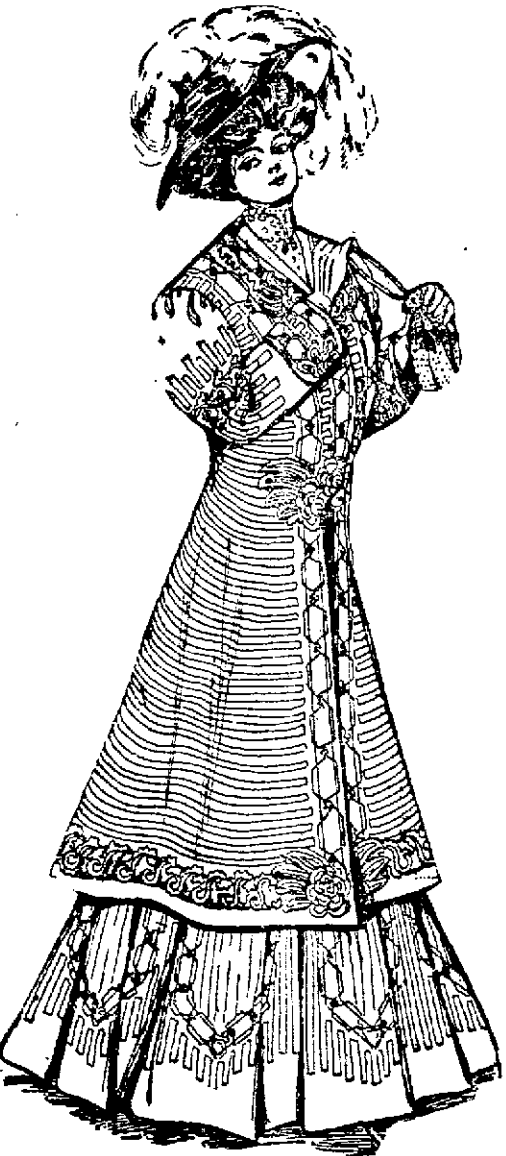

PAYS HIGH RATE. It is now earning at the rate of about 20 per cent per annum. While there is fair assurance that this will be maintained up to the first of 1908, it would of course be fatuous, they say, to attempt to look beyond that. Of this 10 1/2 per cent prospective earnings for the first half of the fiscal year about 4 per cent is produced from investments and about 6 1/2 per cent from transportation business proper.

While it is not so easy to form an estimate of the Southern Pacific's earnings for the current six months, they may be approximated. Gross receipts show a big increase but what the net will show is more uncertain. But the probabilities are that the Southern Pacific will earn a divisible surplus in the first six months of the year of about 7 per cent, or more than sufficient to pay the full year's dividend on its common stock.

EARNINGS ARE EVEN.

In the case of the Southern Pacific, earnings are pretty evenly balanced between the first six months and the last six months of the fiscal year.

If anything, in the last six months, that is, from January to June, earnings are heavier than in the first six months. In the case of the Union Pacific, however, the first six months make considerably better earnings.

The judge took his view of the matter and turned him loose, admonishing him not to drink any more.

SANTA FE SWITCHMEN WANT WAGE INCREASE

Thirty-two hundred switchmen of the Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Denver and Rio Grande and other roads in the territory west of Denver are waiting to find out if they are to receive an additional increase in pay of one cent an hour. Recently they made a demand for an increase of two cents an hour above the award made at Chicago a number of months ago by all the big railroads to various classes of employees.

JUDGE MORROW RETURNS

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—United States Circuit Judge W. W. Morrow arrived in San Francisco yesterday from the East. Judge Morrow and his wife are just back from Europe, where they spent several months. Eight months ago the judge's eyesight began to fail and physicians told him that unless he gave up his work on the bench he would, in short time, be blind. He went abroad, and after a long rest feels that he has fully recovered.

Dan O'Leary Is Wonderful Man

Even if Dan O'Leary, the veteran pedestrian, does not succeed in his attempt to walk a mile at the beginning of each hour for 1,000 hours he has already given a most remarkable exhibition of endurance. The end of the first week of his forty-two-day walk at Dacey's Norwood Inn finds him in excellent condition, cheerful and showing very little evidence of fatigue or drowsiness. He is as confident as ever of his success in the undertaking, which has tried to the utmost the mental and physical prowess of many ambitious pedestrians and of which only one thoroughly authenticated record has been made.

Increasing interest has been manifested by the physicians in the test and many of them have examined the veteran, invariably commenting upon his splendidly preserved physique. "From his shoulders down," said one of them, "he is as perfect as he probably was at 35."

O'Leary, it will be recalled, won the international championship from E. P. Weston in London in 1877. This feat was a very even contest, and toward the close both walkers showed the effects of the great strain. It was a six-day go-as-you-please event and the backers and trailers resorted to every known expedient to cheer him, which has tried to the utmost the mental and physical prowess of many ambitious pedestrians and of which only one thoroughly authenticated record has been made.

Major Taylor Quits Riding

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Major Taylor, the great negro cyclist, who recently returned to his home in Worcester after a successful racing season abroad, has announced his permanent retirement as a rider. When Taylor left this country last spring he was in poor condition, and on his arrival at the other side was better repeatedly by foreign riders. But before he had been there long he regained his old time phenomenal speed and scored victory over every other top rider in Europe. Jacquella was the only one abroad whom he failed to beat. When he raced this Frenchman Taylor was in poor condition, and later when another match was proposed Jacquella was in such poor shape that the American refused to meet him.

Wrestlers Invade Great Britain

About the same time the big Japanese wrestler, Hiraichiro, came across the continent to New York, a couple of Slavonian experts at the game were on the way to England from the ancient kingdom of Macedonia. They were brought from that troubled country by Antonio Pierre, who is well known as a manager of professional athletes in the British metropolis. He has great difficulty in getting the pair of youthful strong men out of their native country as they are a patriotic aversion to letting any man of prowess go to the other lands.

ables is Dan't long suit. He is not a radical vegetarian, but believes that most persons eat too much meat and fried stuff. During the test he will eat and drink what he pleases, only, he says, he pleases to have only what is healthy and strength building.

ASK ROOT TO FIND FISHERS

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Mrs. Alice Roosevelt-Longworth and her husband stopped here today on their way home from their western trip and remained long enough to attend the theater twice. Although in the city from noon until midnight, when they took the train for their home in Cincinnati, Mr. and Mrs. Longworth made no social calls whatever and saw none of their friends in Chicago. Mrs. Longworth had entirely recovered from the fright she experienced at the narrow escape from death of her friend, Mrs. Charles F. Jov, of St. Louis, who was lost last Wednesday in a storm near the Grand Canyon. "The story, printed in the papers, was the effect that we had difficulty in securing our drawing room on the train coming from the Grand Canyon is substantially true," said Mr. Longworth of the Auditorium annex this evening. "We had secured tickets for drawing room 'A' in the Pullman, but when we boarded the train we found two foreigners, Germans, I think they were, occupying the compartment. Through some mistake they had been placed in our drawing room. However, as soon as we showed tickets entitling us to drawing room 'A' the foreigners gave up their seats and we were permitted to eject the Germans is not correct. They surrendered the compartment graciously when assured that it belonged to us."

the grandstand he shook his hand and smiled confidently up at his wife and a large party of friends and then he and Martin settled themselves in the machine intent on winning new honors.

The signal for the start was given. Rehm jockeyed for choice of position and drew to his liking, a close second to a good pacemaker. It was so cleverly done that his friends smiled confidently. Faster and faster the leader drove, until his car whizzed along so rapidly that only the faint whirr was heard. Rehm could not be shaken off.

TIRE ON WHEEL BREAKS.
It was as if his front wheels sought to fondle the rear wheels of the pace-maker, and when the machines passed the grandstand, after going half the distance, it was evident that Rehmann could take the lead and win as he wished. His perfect mastery of the machine culled forth cheers upon cheers and there were shouts of "take the lead."

Rasmussen must have decided upon this course, as he was seen to throw himself off the track to pass his only chance of escape. He was seen to fall into the water, and the grandstand saw a great cloud of dust arise from the track and they shut their eyes in fear. Out of the cloud arose a man in a blue shirt and a hat, who was seen to run from the track and they shut their eyes in fear. The man in the blue shirt was seen to run from the track and they shut their eyes in fear. The man in the blue shirt was seen to run from the track and they shut their eyes in fear.

MET INSTANT DEATH.
Rehm fell in a heap toward the fence and his head struck on the spoke of the broken wheel, crushing him.

A rush was made from all parts of the track toward the two men and the constabulary had difficulty in maintaining order. Mrs. Rehn, shaking off those who would restrain her, was fighting her way through the crowd bent on reaching the body of her husband, and screaming hysterically. I required force to restrain her and she lost her reason. She was removed to her hotel, while the body of her husband was carried to a nearby stable and examined by Dr. Freeman, who pronounced the autist dead. Attention was then given Moritz, and there is some hope of his recovery, though in addition to a broken shoulder blade and collarbone and internal injuries his skull is fractured.

Heavy depression settled upon the drivers present, especially Bert Dingley, known as one of the most capable drivers in America; Fernando Nelson, holder of the record from Los Angeles to San Francisco; and A. H. Piepenburg, who viewed the race with his bride of a week beside him. All declared they will never again drive a car in a race.

DEMOCRATIC CONFERENCE COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED San Francisco Convention Program Goes Through Quickly and No Nominations Made for City Offices.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—The Democratic local convention met tonight in the Convention Hall, effected permanent organization and adjourned to the call of the chair, and all in the space of twenty-two minutes.

It was a masterly piece of program work effected by Thomas W. Hickey, chairman of the Democratic County Committee, who has presided over more than one convention in the past and tonight was chosen chairman of the gathering that will nominate a Democratic ticket to be placed before the voters in November.

Contrary to custom, no attempt was made to effect temporary organization. The roll of the convention being certified by the registrar, Chairman Hickey ruled that this obviated the necessity of appointing committees on credentials and permanent organization.

The committees called for by the convention tonight included one of eighteen on order of business and appointment of a new county committee, one of seven on platform and resolutions, and one of five on credentials. The first named will be announced by Chairman Hickey at a later date. That on credentials was announced tonight, as follows: Louis H. Mosser was chairman, J. P. Haggerty, W. H. McCarthy, Charles H. Holcomb, J. Leo Park.

TO SEEK AGREEMENT. The resolution calling for this conference committee expressly stated that it shall endeavor to arrive at an agreement for the making of joint nominations by the three conventions for every office to be filled at the ensuing municipal election or for any other office.

It was a Democratic convention of the good, old-fashioned sort minus the disputes. The old familiar faces were seen in the floor before Tom Hickey sent the delegates to their seats.

Of course Gavin McNab was on hand, holding many and diverse conferences with his lieutenants. W. M. Cannon though not a delegate could stay away. Secretary Tommy Walsh of the Democratic State Central Committee was a delegate so was there by virtue of right. Louis Mosser also. Al McCauley District Attorney Langdon's political manager looked on from the benches. Tom Geary came all the way from Sonoma to try a few nuts he said.

Plenty of candidates were on hand to feel the pulse of the throng. All fluttered and there but there was little excitement. The crowd had been puffed out that nothing but organization was to be effected, and there was no fight over that.

The Good Government League with its motto "Taylor and Langdon" was amply represented by William Green Harrison. I-dore Jacobs and Secretary Hugh Burke the latter of whom occupied a seat on the platform.

HICKEY'S SPEECH. Tom Hickey was voted into the chair after a spirited address by Ed Hanson, in which the young lawyer referred to the county committee chairman as "that gifted parliamentarian." Hickey, made one of his rattling all-fire speeches, opening the convention declaring that he would be looking to San Francisco to produce a leader against special privilege and official corruption, and calling upon Democrats to obey the summons, for that Democracy has stood out for that clean and decent in politics and PLANKS WHICH UNION LABOR PARTY ARE NOW PLANNING Will Nominate a Candidate for Mayor and for Other Offices Next Monday Night.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—The platform of the Union Labor party will contain strong planks in favor of municipal ownership for the immediate reconstruction of the Geary street railway and its operation by the city for the acquisition of the Springs Valley and other sources for a municipal water system, for an auxiliary salt water system for protection against fire for an eight-hour day for all wage-earners, for increased pay for firemen, policemen and all municipal employees, for the rehabilitation of all municipal buildings including the City Hall and Hall of Justice, and for a perfect sewer system and also for a fund for permanent improvements.

The platform will also promise good pavements, additional school houses, parks and fire protection.

A strong plank will deal with Japanese exclusion and the extension of the Chinese exclusion act to include Japanese and Korean coolies will be demanded of Congress.

When the convention reassembles next Wednesday night the first business taken up will be the report of the committee on permanent organization and rules of order after which the committee on platform and resolutions

DENVER SOCIETY LEADER POISONED BY PTOMAINES

DENVER, Sept. 21.—There was consternation in the household of Mrs. Genevieve Chandler-Phillips this morning when it became known that the well-known society leader had been poisoned.

Mrs. Phillips was taken suddenly and violently ill after dining at her home 1277 Logan avenue, last evening. She was forced to take to her bed immediately, but the seriousness of her illness was not understood until this morning, when a physician was summoned. The patient is still suffering considerably, but is said to be out of danger. She will be confined to her room for several days.

WOMAN TO TELL OF JUNGLE TRIP

Mrs. Harriet Chalmers Adams Explored Remote Sections of South America.

The visit of Mrs. Harriet Chalmers Adams to San Francisco during the month of October will be the occasion of a number of interesting affairs at the women's clubs before which Mrs. Adams is scheduled to give talks on her travels in South America. And the fact that Mrs. Adams has recently returned from a journey covering a period of three years, during which she visited every country in South America, is a fact penetrating to borderlands never before reached by a white woman, indicates her competency to make interesting revelations on this subject.

She will explain how it feels to ride 1000 miles in the saddle, to endure great hardships and to play the leading role in a number of interesting adventures. Mrs. Adams has been the guest of Indian tribes that have changed little since discovered by the Spaniards. She has information to impart concerning everything in South America, from unclothed savages to ancient Latin-American cities, and such information is a departure from what may have been told before on the same subject because of the novelty of the feminine point of view.

Though there have been other travelers to explain the thrill that accompanies the use of the hunter's gun, it will probably sound like a new story when Mrs. Adams describes the sensation of shooting quanaos in Patagonia, of bringing down jaguars in French Guiana, and catching monkeys in Peru. It will also be more or less interesting to the club women of San Francisco who never Mrs. Adams will also tell interesting things concerning what the women wear in the countries she has visited. Here she says the Paris models are not very generally followed.

Mrs. Adams will begin her lectures on October 1 before the Tuesday club at Sacramento, after which she will come to this city and will return to New York the first of November, where she will fill engagements with the Brooklyn Institute of Art and the National Geographical Society of Washington, D. C.

LOVE-CRAZED; ENDS HIS LIFE

Lack of $1 Leads Would-be Groom to Attempt Death of Bride.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 21.—Andrew Terranto, an Italian sailor, 30 years old, is dying tonight by his own hand because of his failure to wed Amelia Mellesena, whom he met first only two weeks ago.

The young woman today promised to marry him and they repaired to the auditor's office for a license. The price was $3 and Terranto had but $2. He left his bride-to-be saying he would return with the necessary dollar. She waited a reasonable time for Terranto to put in an appearance and then paid the fee herself, took the license and returned to her home.

ATTEMPTS MURDER. There were several hours later the Italian presented himself and insisted on the ceremony being performed at once, but the girl flatly refused, whereupon Terranto attempted to stab her with a dirk. He was prevented from carrying out his purpose though before him he attempted to wrestle the knife from him he attempted his own life, cutting a gash in his neck.

He then left for his hotel, and on reaching his room procured a revolver and shot himself through the head. The wound will prove fatal.

HE SCOFFS AT AEROPLANES

Sir Hiram Maxim Believes Air-ignible Balloons Will Never Become Practicable.

LONDON, September 21.—Sir Hiram Maxim, one of the first scientists to experiment with dirigible balloons and the aeroplanes, is not optimistic about the future of the latter. He does not think that even when they be come practicable they will be used for the transportation of men and passengers, but rather that they will become the playthings of the wealthy adventurers like racing automobiles. He today Sir Hiram laughed when asked about the future of dirigible war balloons.

I don't think that men will ever come when they will stop nations buying guns and battleships.

DIFFICULT TASK. Taking up the subject seriously, Sir Hiram said: I always have been strongly of the opinion that it would be very difficult indeed to make a navigable balloon—that is, a balloon that could be relied upon when only a light wind is blowing. I saw many attempts in England to make navigable balloons, but so far as I know, none of them succeeded. I have traveled with the wind exactly like any other balloon and have always found it very difficult to keep it steady. But with great experience and better materials and what is more than all, the advent of extremely light, powerful motors, which are now obtainable, new results are possible. I think the future of the dirigible is bright. I think the future of the dirigible is bright. I think the future of the dirigible is bright.

cially they are not interested in the third. The small land owners are also remaining away from the polls. The new electoral law, designed to make voting more difficult, and combined with the lassitude of the masses of voters is succeeding in making the elections a farce, which is the object of the reactionaries. The Jews in the cities of South-east Russia are fearful of a renewal of the pogroms soon. M. Kravran, editor of a reactionary Kishinev paper, and a fomenter of the Kishinev massacre, declares a secret league of Russian reactionaries, which in the event of an attack upon the Czar or Premier Stolypin, will massacre every Jew in Russia. Editor Kravran seems determined to hold the Jews responsible for attempt on the life of the Czar or the Premier.

KEYMEN EXPECT STRIKE TO END WITHIN NEXT 10 DAYS Men Look for Favorable Settlement

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Leaders of the striking telegraphers are strongly of the belief that the end of the strike is in sight and will soon be settled satisfactorily. Chief Strategist Daniel Russell of the telegraphers' union said today: "No committee went to Oyster Bay in spite of what the officials of the telegraph company say, a settlement will take place within ten days. I cannot give my reasons, but there is a strong reason that a settlement will be reached soon and we are holding back on this edition of our organ. Fair Play to see what will happen."

The appeal for financial aid for the telegraphers sent out by President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor is being forwarded to 27,500 leaders of the American Federation of Labor. National Deputy President Thomas of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union said today: "It is hard to tell how much money will be brought in by the appeal. If the unions donate on an average $20 each, $540,000 will be raised, but it is quite probable that twice that amount will be donated. We are now pending $20,000 to work on the strike. The money from the federation will enable us to hold out four months longer."

Mr. Russell said today: Mahan and Douglass, who appealed to the United States Labor Commissioner Nell at Washington without the authority of the union will be severely disciplined. Superintendent Brooks of the Western Union said that they had received no word from Oyster Bay and expected none. They are opposed to any further dealing with the union officials.

Postmaster George Flisbe passed the Governor as he hurried as a messenger with a special delivery letter. When the Governor called after him he recognized his voice and was all attention. Biggs, the new chief of police, evaded Gillett furtively and was just about to evade one of his new soft shoes in a trill him when he discovered his error. It was simply a case of mistaken identity. AWAIT FOR DIVORCE. Miss Kuttner was asked if she should have been set for the marriage of herself and Earle.

"Why, of course not," she said laughingly. "How could we do that when Mrs. Earle has not yet obtained her divorce?"

"Since you became known as the 'original affinity' do you know some fifty more have been discovered?" she was asked.

"I suppose I ought to be proud of the distinction of being the original but I am afraid I am not," she replied.

Miss Kuttner was asked if she pressed love for Earle still and blushing she said:

I have always been willing to admit that.

CONSCIENCE CLEAR. Asked if she thought the ethics of the case justified her expression of a great love for Mr. Earle despite the fact that he had a wife she replied:

I do not care to discuss the ethics of the case. One thing I do know is that any conscience does not berate me for anything I have done.

I shall be here all winter living with my mother," she continued. "Mr. Earle will live at Monroe. Neither of us has any plan for the future. I have not heard from Mrs. Earle since her arrival in France, and did not expect to. Neither has Mr. Earle related any word so far as I know. Of course we knew of her safe arrival at Havre."

As the yacht was approaching the Franklin street wharf something went wrong with the engine and Col. Wall, in frenzy lost his beloved boat stove her nose against the pier, grabbed an anchor and hurled it far to windward—yol Ho!

The anchor struck the water with a mighty splash and the boat slowly slackened her speed and came to a stop. The genial colonel smiled a broad expansive smile. His superior knowledge had saved the day. Suddenly one of the guests made a discovery—the anchor was not fastened to anything and had simply sunk to the bottom of the estuary and the outgoing tide had stopped the yacht. Boys! they're on ice, said the colonel, leading the way to the cabin.

'GLADWAY' TO BE FEATURE OF ALAMEDA CO. CARNIVAL

Decorations of Booths and Preparations for Opening at Idora Park Being Rapidly Completed.

Probably no one feature of the Alameda County Carnival, which opens tomorrow, will attract more attention than the standpoint of general interest and of comprehensiveness than that of the art exhibit under the general direction of the Arts and Crafts. This will be under the personal supervision of Miss Sally Dangerfield, a well-known Berkeley artist, and will be separated into five departments.

The first department shows the artists at work on metal-beating and hammering copper, brass and malleable iron into fanciful shapes and artistic designs. In this section will be placed specimens of the weaver's art—rugs and tapestries, interspersed with wood carvings portraying mural scenery and other fanciful designs.

The other four departments will be devoted to oil and water color work, arranged according to the style and conception. Hand-painted china of the most delicate workmanship, mosaics and ceramics of all kinds will be scattered throughout this department. They will include contributions from all over Alameda county. Here also will be found the finest work of the bookbinder's art—book plates and bindings that run up into thousands of dollars in value. The cheapest one there is valued at not less than $100 a volume.

The committee has arranged to place this exhibit at the north end of the park in a large building devoted entirely to the Arts and Crafts. It will be arranged in the form of a hollow oval, and in the center, as a furtherance of the artistic scheme pursued throughout the entire section, there will be a display of potted ferns, palms and other flowers, the work of the horticultural exhibit from Niles.

The feature of the carnival will be the "Gladway." Here will be found the fun and merriment of the exhibition. It will be here that the contest will shower upon the crowds. To keep the excitement up to the highest pitch the following shows will appear:

Show by the Roosevelt Hospital of Berkeley; moving picture show, under the auspices of the West Oakland Home; exhibition of glassblowers; Johnson's Illusion; an egg show; negro minstrels; Golby, the bicyclist, who makes a leap over a 38-foot gap on a bicycle; a snake show, with a Hindu charmer; a full-fledged circus, with a troupe of 150 feet on the Gladway; a tattoo show and the Reliance Club zoo.

The contest over the young women who are to attend the queen of the carnival as her ladies in waiting closed this evening when the honor was accorded to Miss Vera Dutcher of Livermore, Miss Hazel Dennis of Niles and Miss Laura Miller.

The young women are staying at the Key Route Inn as the guests of the managing committee.

Tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock the queen with her full court, will have the first rehearsal for the purpose of completing the final arrange-

DOES AMERICAN BEAUTY OUTCLASS ENGLISH TYPE?

Argument Over Relative Merits Waxes Hot

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Since Lady Violet Greville's assertion that English women's beauty is greater and more enduring than that of American women, there has been a heated discussion as to the relative merits of the women of both countries, in the London newspapers. Mason Forster, the French essayist and author of "Love's Flame," in a letter to the editor of the Standard says:

"It is the general opinion in France that England is the one country in the world wherein there are the most unpleasantly ugly women, but on the other hand that it is also a country wherein the prettiest women are found."

"If all American women were so beautiful as the alleged fifty Buckeye beauties, it seems to me, American artists, who have so much talent, would not have failed to create, in the course of a century, a number of masterpieces for the future glory of the museums of the world. Where are the masterpieces? When American women have proved their claims before the great painters and sculptors it will be time to talk of their sovereign beauty; but proofs do not yet seem to have been given and until they are I think Englishmen, instead of being annoyed at the ambitious claims of American women, would do well to imitate the French."

ONLY SMILED.

"When we read about fifty Buckeye beauties we only smiled. A Berlin anthropologist has told us the American is a product of the crossing of Anglo-Saxon and German blood. He ought to be tall, fair, rather heavy, with upright forehead, short nose, pink complexion. Because these are the general characteristics of the English and German races. Now, really, all Americans who can reckon several generations in America are short, dark, thin, often with long curved noses, yellowish complexion and prominent cheek bones. They are becoming more and more like red Indians. They have sloping foreheads, wear their hair plaited."

The rehearsal is in charge of Morris Stuart.

A force of carpenters has been working on all of the booths in an endeavor to get everything completed in time for the opening at 12 o'clock noon on Monday, and it will necessitate putting on an extra force of men and working all today to accomplish this result. Several of the orders and institutions have already completed their booths and will start to do the final decorating. Among these are the following:

Ladies of the Maccabees; Fraternal Brotherhood; Odd Fellows; Ladies' Relief Society; Tribe of Ben Hur; Royal Court; Woodmen of the World; West Oakland Home; Fabiola Hospital; Oakland Club; St. Mary's Catholic Church; St. Joseph's Catholic Church; St. Matthews' Episcopal Mission; Free Kindergarten and the Woman's Guild of St. John's Episcopal Church.

CARNIVAL INTERESTS BERKELEY.
Great interest is being taken in the coming carnival at Idora Park by the Berkeley Real Estate Exchange. A committee, composed of E. E. Reed, H. A. Martin and C. E. Newton has prepared and published an edition of 100,000 copies of statistics showing the growth and progress of Berkeley during the so-called "hard times" for distribution to the visitors at the carnival.

tered to their foreheads and regard a beard with horror.

"Their women adore beads and glittering jewelry; like to wear a quantity of feathers on their heads and load their fingers with rings. They are small, their legs are too short, and they often appear old at a comparatively early age. It would be too good to think that in a century the great grandchildren of the Buckeye beauties will be as hideous as the squaw Femmore Cooper or Mayne Reid described."

AMERICAN REPLIES.

Replying to the Frenchman's criticism of the American type of beauty, Artist Penrhyn Staalwaas writes:

"A modern American portrait artist at least depicts the beauty of his countrywomen to the best of his ability, while most of the French painters I know are continually on the lookout for American sitters. Why, more prints of Gibson's American girls are sold in England than of all the English painters combined. When an English woman decorates her wall with the picture of a pretty girl, it is ten chances to one that a Gibson girl is chosen."

"Why do the French illustrators depict an English woman as a hideous creature with protruding teeth and figure that would look well in a matchbox, while they invariably draw quite a charming type to represent Miss America?"

"Think of pearls and peaches when painting flesh," said Sir Joshua Reynolds, and we have but to look at some English beauties to see the justice of his exhortation. But is the rosy flush that glows under the delicate olive skin of the American girl less beautiful?"

ON FIFTH AVENUE.

"The handsomest women it has been my pleasure to see were Americans and I know of no place where one sees more beautiful girls than on Fifth avenue, while they invariably draw quite a charming type to represent Miss America?"

Here noted actresses and actors drop into the Savoy for supper, but nobody stares at them. If a noted actress or actor drops into Sherry's or Mullin's, everybody stops eating to ruble.

"The American girl has one great advantage over her English cousin. She has been taught to carry and groom herself better. Go to an English dinner and you will be tempted to poke half the women in the back and tell them to sit up. Some one should start a society to provide English women with tress for their shoes. Toes are very pretty, but one dislikes seeing them modeled in leather."

Health in the Canal Zone.

The high wages paid make it a mighty temptation to our young artisans to join the force of skilled workmen needed to construct the Panama Canal. Many are restrained, however, by the fear of fever and malaria. It is the knowing ones—those who have used Electric Bitters—who do not shirk without this fear, well knowing they are safe from malarious influence with Electric Bitters on hand. ## GREAT FUTURE FOR OAKLAND

City Never Offered More Good Opportunities Than It Does Today.

(By M. J. Layman, President of the Layman Real Estate Company.)

Oakland's future is assured—not a scintilla of doubt regarding that point. It is the magnitude of this future that we should be interested in. From a real estate man's point of view, I will mention what I consider the four potent factors of the growth of a city. First, manufacturing; second, homes; third, commerce; fourth, investments.

The first must have suitable sites, numerous and efficient help and favorable transportation facilities. These we assuredly have. Fifteen miles of water front and three trans-continental railroads offer exceptional inducements for factories, while we have the combined population of Oakland, San Francisco, Berkeley, Alameda and outlying districts, over 700,000 souls, to draw from for skilled labor and help.

As a home city, Oakland is certainly second to none. We have an empire of territory, affording ideal and beautiful locations for residence. Car-lines interlace these districts, giving cheap, clean and rapid transit to every point of interest. Within thirty minutes' ride from business center by car or automobile, you can reach the quiet rustic and sylvan spots in Oakland's hills. Our climate is unsurpassed. What we do need is more houses to rent at reasonable rents. Our population is fast increasing and these people must have accommodations.

MUST IMPROVE HARBOR.
To further our commercial relations I am heartily in accord in the movement to develop our water front and waterways. I can conceive of no other thing that can give Oakland a greater impetus than to have a harbor and docks for deep water vessels. Oakland harbor means the name of Oakland city all over the maritime world.

Regarding investments I will say that there never was a better time for investing in Oakland than now. You can buy anywhere the business property of the outlying districts with a certainty of future value increase. Our tax rate will be lower than ever this year. This has been proved by a twenty per cent voluntary reduction by the Peoples Water Company and a similar reduction by the Oakland Gas, Light and Heat Company.

But, back of all this, the most important of all, is the civic pride and unanimity of purpose of the people of Oakland to boost for her. We have a progressive administration, and energetic Chamber of Commerce, and numerous other organizations for improvements. We will have clean streets, front and back, more parks, unexcelled schools. The future greatness of Oakland is in the hands of her own citizens, and from present indications they are fully alive to their responsibilities and opportunities.

I might add here that it would be a credit to the city and of financial advantage to themselves if every owner of business property on the principal retail streets would, inside of the next few years, modernize their holdings or build new ones.

What we need and must have is more business buildings to accommodate large retail firms who would come here to locate if they could obtain proper locations, Broadway, Washington and Clay streets should all have modern and handsome buildings.

We must hold our trade in Oakland. We can do it only by offering attractive stores and a variety of them. One firm cannot supply the demand for these places. Owners who will not improve should sell and make way for those who will. Our business center is expanding.

I expect to see Clay street lined with retail stores in the near future.

It has been said that "the Lord helps those who help themselves," but here with beautiful hills, a fine lake, almost unlimited waterways, a splendid geographical position, he has said, "I have helped you already, go and help yourselves."—Oakland Critic.

Wickham Havens reports an exceedingly busy week's demand for the Fourth avenue terrace lots being a predominating feature. Grading operations are being carried on with the utmost speed and water pipes are being laid on Thirteenth avenue.

The grading is finished on Thirteenth avenue, Greenwood street, Ardley street, Linwood, Fourteenth avenue, Randolph, Brighton and Beaumont streets. The remaining few streets will be finished within two weeks.

The basis of all suburban real estate transactions, whether they are speculative or otherwise, is a desire for homes. It is gratifying to note that this demand is greater now than at any time within the last five years, with the exception of a few months immediately following the fire. We have had inquiries from British Columbia to Mexico regarding Fourth Avenue Terrace and many lots have been sold out of town purchasers, proving that Oakland is becoming a Mecca in the eyes of the whole Pacific coast.

IT'S pretty nice to have a reputation for correct dressing and we are glad to continue at making you one.

That is, our Clothing will do the trick every time, and make you a sort of Beau Brummel reputation.

But it isn't only the stylishness—it's the comfort and durability you get out of one of our suits that will make them appeal to you—especially when the low price is considered.

A Convincing Experiment

Dr. Sabouraud of the Pasteur Institute, Paris, France, inoculated a rabbit with human dandruff germs, and "in between five and six weeks," says the official report of the Pasteur Institute, "the rabbit was completely denuded, in fact it had become entirely bald."

This experiment proves that dandruff is a contagious disease due to the presence of a microbic growth in the sebaceous glands of the scalp. It also proves that unless the formation of dandruff is stopped—by destroying the dandruff germ—that it will lead to falling hair and incurable baldness.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

Is the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ, and its success in the treatment of dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair is oft times little short of marvelous. Send for booklet.

The Argonaut on Mayor Taylor.

The Argonaut, which is stigmatized by the Spreckels newspaper clique as the organ of Patrick Calhoun, very strenuously urges the election of Mayor Taylor to the place he now fills. Whether the street railway magnate is in accord with Rudolph Spreckels and the Argonaut in this particular we know not, but the arguments set forth by the San Francisco weekly are worthy of examination. The Argonaut admits that Dr. Taylor is not an ideal mayor, possessing "neither the temper nor training of a man of affairs," and having the "liability common to all men, and especially to men of the idealistic type, to make mistakes in dealing practically with men and things." "But," continues the Argonaut, "Dr. Taylor has something vastly more important than administrative temper and training. He has unshakable honesty and absolute public confidence. He has, too, a wide acquaintance with all classes of our people, he has untiring energy and he has a fair judgment of men, as shown in appointments made within the past six weeks. On top of all, Dr. Taylor stands to the outside world as the visible mark and symbol of the moral regeneration of San Francisco. His election, following his brief tenure of office under special appointment, would signify that San Francisco after sober second thought has in her municipal life entered upon a calculated course of decency, efficiency and responsibility."

A tree is known by its fruits. Viewed as a candidate for Mayor Dr. Taylor must be judged by what he has done as Mayor not by his past career as a private citizen, his talents as a physician, his success as a lawyer or his gifts as a poet. What has he done to merit the statement that he personifies the moral regeneration of San Francisco? In what respect has he justified the high expectation with which he was inducted into office? The Supervisors he appointed were selected for him in advance of his becoming Mayor. The appointments, taken as a whole, are fairly good and are worthy of commendation, but Dr. Taylor is no more responsible for them than he is for his election to the mayoralty. His Police Commission is excellent in point of personal character, but it is absurd as an official body. It is composed of a lot of square pegs set in round holes, which are moved about by an outside force operating independently of the Mayor. Dr. Taylor does not control his own Police Commission. Hence we have Biggy for Chief of Police, which is bad from every point of view. Then there is Casey. Except for the blessed riddance from Dinan, Mayor Taylor has not improved any department of the municipal government.

Ever since he succeeded Schmitz Dr. Taylor has been engaged in political intrigues and dickers, none of them creditable or calculated to further the cause of good government or elevate the standard of efficiency in official life or the tone of politics. He has won the favor of Abe Ruef, and has gained as his adherents as many of the Ruef-Schmitz machine workers as he could give offices. We find him doing politics with Tom Eagan, Tom Cator, Michael Casey, Andy Gallagher and other followers of the fallen boss. The Civil Service provisions of the charter are being ignored in spirit if not in letter, and the executive patronage is being used to reward services not over clean even if admitted to be necessary in connection with the graft prosecution. Dr. Taylor is doing precisely what Schmitz did and with the same people. He is building up a political machine, using Ruef's material largely, and rendering obedience to a boss.

This is a plain statement of facts too notorious and self-evident to admit of debate. Is the record made during Dr. Taylor's brief term a guarantee or a promise of better things? Is it what the thoughtful, sincere and respectable element in San Francisco desires or can honestly endorse? The idealism that develops pottering, pedantic demagoguery and hypocrisy is neither "a symbol of moral regeneration" or a quality that can be depended upon to give the city a firm, efficient and thoroughly upright administration.

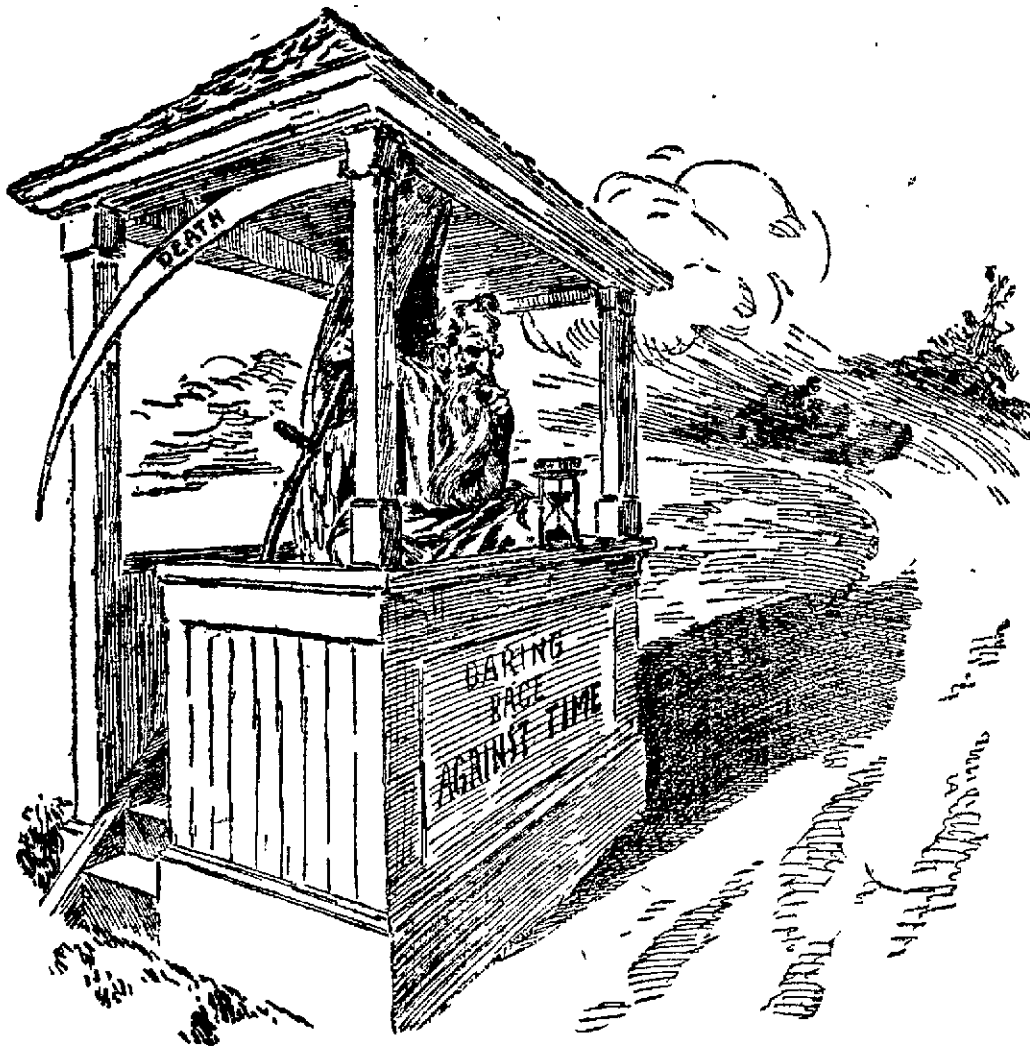

The Navy Department has been quick to recognize the complete success and high value of the marine turbine as illustrated in the recent trans-Atlantic voyage of the Lusitania, the biggest passenger steamship afloat. Contracts have been awarded by Secretary Metcalf to Eastern shipbuilders for five torpedo boat destroyers to be equipped with turbine engines of the Parsons type. Discretionary powers in the designing of the engines have been given the contractors, but the vessels when built must show a speed capacity of at least twenty-four knots.

Inter-County Improvements.

An important inter-county conference took place Friday at Walnut Creek, in which the Boards of Supervisors of Alameda and Contra Costa counties, representatives of Oakland's Chamber of Commerce and Merchants' Exchange and other representative citizens of the two counties, were present. The conference discussed two semi-public projects, each of which, if carried out, promises to be of great inter-county benefit. One is the granting to an Eastern corporation of an electric railroad franchise across the dividing range from Walnut Creek to Oakland, the other is the construction of a wagon road on an easy grade to the summit of Mt. Diablo. Private interests are inseparably associated, of course, with both of the proposed enterprises. For example: the wagon road project develops on the summit of the peak an ideal mountain hotel site which has been in private ownership since the late John S. Hittell pre-empted it in anticipation of its possible selection by the James Lick trustees as the site for Lick Observatory. The immediate purpose of the pre-emption was then defeated through the selection of Mt. Hamilton for the observatory site. The property is now in private hands and its advantages as a mountain hotel site, possessing superb attractions to sight-seers, has long been recognized. The construction of a driveway to the summit on an easy grade will make it at once available.

Of course neither county will derive any direct benefit from the construction of such a wagon road, save what additional tax Contra Costa county will collect through the increased assessable valuation of property affected by the improvement; but both counties will reap great indirect benefit from the tourist travel which the opening of such a rare point of observation to sightseers is sure to attract and the project is, therefore, worthy of public support. It is understood that Contra Costa county does not have the money to carry out the project, and that the road's construction must depend upon private subscription, in which the business men of Oakland and Berkeley will be expected to figure. Of course, such a subscription list should be headed first by the owner of the summit of the mountain, with a handsome contribution attached to his signature as an assurance that he is not wholly selfish in the matter. It would help materially to raise the money necessary to build the road.

The projected electric railroad from Walnut Creek to Oakland will be a distinctive public benefit, and the enterprise is entitled to every reasonable support, provided that the sincerity and financial responsibility of the franchise seekers is fairly established. There ought not to be any difficulty in that respect. If the franchise is being sought for speculative trading purposes, the proposition is unworthy of any special consideration or support. The bona fide character of the projected enterprise must be established, inasmuch as it proposes to occupy the right of way through the inter-county tunnel at the head of the Kennedy grade. That tunnel is the key to direct communication between Oakland and the rich valley lands north of the Contra Costa range, of which Walnut Creek is the center. The latter is now virtually in a pocket. An electric railroad across the range will lift it out. Both counties will, therefore, be benefited by this enterprise whenever it is carried out in good faith. It will give the people of Contra Costa county quick access to market and it will bring more trade to Oakland. The latter is financially interested in the opening up of its show places and in the increase of its commerce.

Progress of the Western Pacific.

Progress is being made on the construction of the Western Pacific much more rapidly than most people are aware. Even those who have been keeping tab on the enterprise are being surprised by the later developments made. It looks at present as if the opening of the Sacramento-Stockton-Oakland division were not very far off, and that before many months pass traffic over the Western Pacific tracks will be carried on between these three points. This city may be invaded any day by the corporation's construction gangs. Nearly the whole of the roadbed from Fruitvale to Altamont is graded. The Western Pacific engineers are setting an example in the thoroughness of their work. Nothing is being done as a temporary makeshift to be reconstructed at some later period. Everything is being built to stand. All bridges are constructed of steel supported on massive concrete abutments. Every culvert is built of concrete. And when it comes to tracking and equipping the roadbed, it will doubtless prove to be correspondingly substantial.

The same system of permanent improvement is in evidence on the construction of the Western Pacific's ferry mole, where work has been vigorously resumed through the employment of a large force of skilled workers in addition to the ordinary construction gangs, and the government wall is being fortified by a concrete superstructure to support the made ground on which the main and yard tracks will be laid.

Permanent railroad improvements of this character, by whatever corporation they are introduced, add to the stability of property values tributary to them, and are heartily welcome. All of the railroads terminating on Oakland's water front and occupying its thoroughfares are, in fact, hastening to put their respective properties in order, enlarging their facilities for the handling of an ever increasing traffic expeditiously and economically and preparing for the new and extraordinary conditions which are rapidly developing here and will soon be pouring in upon us in an irresistible flood.

AN IDYL

(By F. B. THAYER.)

Into my life she came, Ah well!
It's but the same old tale I tell,
Her double chin, bright golden hair,
Pink dimpled cheeks and shoulders fair;
She had me and the fettered spell
Once wove about me held me well.

Out from my life she went again
Also my money, watch and chain,
She caused my bank account to shrink
Ere I came down on earth to think,
With winsome smile and childish ways
She worked me for her rainy days,
Before she went

Before she went, we trod the strand
Within my paw I held her hand,
I told her everything I knew
And many things I didn't too
She'd raise her huge eyes so clear
And murmur, "Oh! I need you dear"
And now I lift my cheek-book lid
And find, without a doubt she did,
While I could "dig" aye, there's the rub,
She surely knew an easy "dub."

And while I doped along the beach
She gathered in all things in reach
Her rouge, her paint and spurious hair
Sure had me down and out for fair,
All summer long

All winter long thou charming elf
I'm selling ribbons off the shelf,
And lying by a little store
Against the time, when at the shore
Once more you shake the plum tree ripe,
And as before my chattels "swipe"

EXCITEMENT CAUSED BY A BUGGY SALE.

"Oakland's" says the esteemed Stockton Mail "is alarmed at Stockton's trade boom." And then it proceeds to gloat over the fact that an Alameda man recently purchased a buggy in Stockton. This is certainly going some. Just how much may be inferred from the fact that the Mail runs a two-column head over the story. Recently the Stockton papers have been talking a great deal about their bank clearings, or, to be exact, the bank clearings of the town, and we presume the increase boasted of is due to the proceeds of this buggy sale. It is no wonder Oakland feels blue—Red Bluff People's Cause.

China's Awakening.

The reform movement in China is leavening the Imperial government into activity, and the evidences that the latter is undergoing a genuine awakening are multiplying and taking tangible form. The Dowager Empress is learning wisdom in her old age. She is recognizing the fact that the tide of internal reform is flowing too strong to resist any longer without imperiling the stability of the Manchu dynasty and its tenure to the throne. A condition has been rapidly coming to a head during the last decade which much finally result, if internal reforms are persistently resisted, in the dismemberment of the empire either through its partition among other nations or by an armed revolution. The triumph of Japan in two wars waged on Chinese territory has made her a dangerous element in the possible dismemberment through the process of foreign partition. The Franco-Japanese compact recently entered into has aroused the gravest suspicions of its purpose in Peking and demonstrated the necessity for devising new means of safeguarding the integrity of the nation against further Japanese encroachment on Chinese territory.

The Dowager Empress has conceived the rational idea that the true method of frustrating a threatened national calamity and saving the Manchu dynasty is to call her own subjects into the Imperial councils. She has, therefore, issued an edict authorizing Prince Pu Lun and the Grand Council to frame resolutions for the establishment of a deliberative council to aid the government in laying the foundation for a parliament and a system of government which shall truly represent the people at large, and in which the wants and opinions of all classes in the empire shall be considered. In doing so the Dowager Empress admits her personal inability at present to establish a parliament which will serve as the foundation of such an administration as China needs and for the initiation of which the time is ripe. The step thus taken is simply the initial toward the modernizing of the Chinese government. The ultimate purpose of the edict is to give the nation a strictly constitutional government by slow, evolutionary processes, as the people need to pass through a probationary period of self-education to fit them for a responsible, representative government. The bulk of the people have been too long in a state of absolute dependence on their autocratic rulers to justify the immediate transfer to them of governmental responsibility through the popular election of a legislative body. That radical change must be introduced by degrees. It would be dangerous to do it by any other process.

But among the reforms which the edict issued provides for immediate introduction through the agency of the joint preliminary council created by the Dowager Empress are the following:

The abolition of the office of investigation of political affairs, now of only nominal existence.

The extension to the other provinces of the model local government system erected in Tien-tsin.

Adoption of compulsory education.

Establishment of government good faith with the people.

Reorganization of the Luchun, or War Board.

Preparation for the gold standard.

Punishment of Chinese officials who discriminate between Manchus and Chinese.

The peaceable modernizing and awakening of a nation which has been asleep and non-progressive for over a thousand years, living within itself on traditions moldy with age, resenting every external influence brought to bear upon it to adopt the rules and methods of life pertaining to modern civilization, and raising all kinds of barriers against commercial intercourse with the rest of the world, is one of the political marvels of the age. The change is, however, practically in sight.

Union Labor Leaders Are Not to Be Fooled

THE KNAVE

New Deal in Regard to the Shyster Lawyers

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—At last an effort is to be made to eradicate one of the cheapest and most dangerous forms of petty graft that has thrived in the city prison and the police courts since their establishment. This graft is only possible when the prison officials and the police magistrates all stand in, for it involves the right of a prisoner to secure the services of the attorney he desires.

As the game is played to-day a man under arrest has little or no show unless he happens to have a drag. The legitimacy of his imprisonment cuts no ice whatever. His right to send for bail or seek legal advice is determined by the prison keeper, who is beyond question always in league with shyster attorneys with whom he splits fees.

Say that a well-to-do man is arrested for some trivial infraction of the law. The publication or other exploitation of his misfortune may mean most anything to him. If he is a man of family it is imperative from his viewpoint that the affair be hushed up as quickly and as effectively as possible. If he is a business man he knows that undesirable notoriety is harmful in the extreme.

So he determines to send for some reputable attorney whom he knows will deal with him legitimately. Then he asks the prison-keeper to convey a message to the lawyer he desires to consult. The prison-keeper takes the message and carefully sees that it is not delivered. In the meantime there may be no charge whatever in the prison register against the alleged culprit. As a rule these cases in which people of prominence figure are what is known as "small book" or detainee. The victim is jailed without being charged, which is a violation of the law, and the newspapers are prevented from learning the fact that the man is really incarcerated.

After a number of futile attempts to secure communication with the lawyer he desires the prisoner grows desperate.

"What am I to do?" he asks the keeper.

"Why get Bill So-and-so," is the reply. "He has a drag with the judges and can fix it up all right. He can do more for you than the man you sent for."

And the prisoner consents to see "Bill," who is a surcharging shyster. He tells him all about his troubles and the shyster proceeds to dwell at length upon the seriousness of the offense. If the man is really a person of consequence the shyster expands his offense to the enormity of the Durrant case, and finally agrees to see what he can do in the matter with his friend the judge. Then he takes his leave, goes across the street, gets a few drinks, sees the policeman or detective who made the arrest, finds out how much it will cost to quash the matter and arranges to have the prisoner charged with disturbing the peace or some equally insignificant thing under an assumed name. And so the victim regains his liberty but not until he has paid all he can afford.

One man who was involved indirectly in a forgery case a week ago had to put up a thousand dollars to a shyster to regain his freedom after failing to get into communication with a prominent attorney who is his personal friend. It was a small book case and as there was no evidence to legitimately hold the unfortunate man he would have secured his release without the expenditure of a cent had he reached his lawyer friend. But the prison-keeper, knowing that he had money, saw to it that he didn't.

I am told a movement is now on foot to bar the shysters from the city prison. If the police authorities do this they will wipe out one of the most elaborate and successful systems of blackmail that San Francisco has known. And that's going some.

There is a pathetic side to the downfall and humiliation of former Police Chief Jerry Dinan. Aside from being naturally unfitted to fulfil the duties of his trying job, Dinan was unfortunate in the selection of his friends. He is a warm-hearted chap and insisted on sticking with the men who had done him favors in the old days regardless of their positions in life or their means of livelihood.

The manner in which he stood for and by Kid Sullivan was grotesque. He was well aware that the best he could get from association with the Kid was the worst of it; but he stuck to him like glue and did all in his power to help the fellow along and out of scrapes. Once he told me that he had faith in Sullivan and felt confident that if he were given a show he would make a desirable citizen in the end. But the public refused to take that view of the friendship and the strongest argument against the former chief's fitness for his job was the fact that he was frequently seen in public with Sullivan.

Now to the pathetic phase of Dinan's passing from the limelight into obscurity. Notwithstanding the fact that the newspapers have been full of stories about the charges preferred against the former chief and over-crowded with narratives of his trials and hearings before the police commissioners, his old mother has been kept in blissful ignorance of her son's plight. The papers she sees contain only a line about Jerry's tribulations. Members of the family are always on hand to answer telephone calls to prevent the possibility of the old lady's knowing of her son's swirl of trouble. She still thinks he is the head of the department and the idol of the people and the force.

Dinan has always been a good son, which is saying a great deal now-a-days. He is naturally a home-loving man and has striven for the betterment of his family. So with all his faults and indiscretions you see there is lots of good in him at bottom. Between Biggy and Dinan, give me Dinan.

The Union Labor Party convention was in a measure a reminder of the Burns-Squires fight at Colma. The battle which was awaited with such interest by the polities all over the state was a fiasco. Tom Egan, chairman of the county committee, was expected to give P. H. McCarthy, president of the Building Trades Council, the tussle of his life for control of the organization. But like Squires he went down and out in one punch. He was all in before time was called.

The reason for Egan's disastrous failure was his alleged secret alliance with the Rudolph Spreckels wing of the Republican party headed by Dan Ryan. As the story goes, Egan, through friends, was ready to endorse Ryan as the Republican candidate for mayor providing Ryan would secure the Republican endorsement of his candidacy for assessor. When this story got out the friends of McCarthy got together and decided to put Egan out of business.

Egan still holds his job on the Board of Works. This fact in itself makes him extremely unpopular with the union men, because they feel he would be dismissed if he had not a secret drag with the people behind Mayor Taylor. And these people are regarded as enemies of the workingmen.

Beyond question P. H. McCarthy is the strongest man in the state with organized labor. And there is good reason for his great popularity for he has done more for the wage-earner than all the other local labor leaders combined. He has secured for the men connected with the building business higher wages than they ever received before and also secured for them the eight-hour day. The unions affiliated with the Building Trades Council are better organized and more effectively managed than any of the other labor organizations and this condition is the result of the untiring and unceasing efforts of McCarthy.

I don't know where the Ryanites got the idea of Egan's strength. They were constantly inspiring articles in the newspapers about the forthright fashion in which he was to 'side-track McCarthy when all of the people that know anything at all about practical politics were aware that he had no more chance of beating McCarthy than you or I.

But the literature that daily appears in the newspapers bearing or alleged to bear upon the political situation is merely a joke. The men writing politics for most of the papers are importations and know nothing whatever about the town or its people. Aside from that they can't write. And when you get people who not only cannot get the facts and who cannot write their useless misinformation in an entertaining manner, you have what newspaper men call stars. But the subscribers never appear to be able to read them.

I am told confidentially that School Director Tom Boyle will be the Union Labor candidate for assessor.

There is a good deal of quiet amusement among the lawyers over the way somebody jerked Judge Dunne's coat tails just as he was preparing to order Abe Ruef taken from his luxurious private apartments on Fillmore street and incarcerated in the city prison, which is a much more unpleasant place of confinement than the county jail.

Dunne cherishes a grudge against Ruef, and has been growing restive under the severe criticism of the peculiar favor shown the deposed boss. When Biggy was made chief of police Dunne saw an opportunity to square himself with the public and hand Ruef a jolt at the same time. But he only got started. Somebody gave the high sign, and Ruef is still doing the parlor boarder act on Fillmore street. It is supposed and has been rumored that the somebody was Gumshoe Burns bearing a message from Rudolph Spreckels to the effect that Ruef was not to be disturbed.

So Biggy was not told to take Ruef to the city prison, but merely admonished by Judge Dunne that the cost of keeping the ex-boss must be decreased. It has been running above $50 a day.

Ruef is still enjoying all the privileges and liberties formerly accorded him, but some of the bills are to be paid by himself or out of the graft prosecution fund. I am informed that Judge Dunne was told that it wouldn't do to be harsh with Ruef on the eve of being called to testify against Tirey L. Ford. The case for the prosecution depends upon his coming through strong against Ford. Which explains why Ruef is playing the role of a pampered pet instead of being sent to jail like any other convicted felon.

There is an interesting story behind the refusal of the Union Labor convention to consider the fusion proposition forwarded by the Republican convention. The leaders of the dominant faction of the Union Labor party are convinced that Spreckels is scheming to depose them and obtain control of the Building Trades and Labor Councils through Egan, Casey, Gallagher, et al. They are bitterly opposed to Taylor because they believe he is using the municipal patronage at his disposal to destroy the integrity of their organization and bring it under the domination of a political machine headed by men antagonistic to unionism and its principles.

It is not merely for supremacy in the Union Labor party that McCarthy, Tveitmo and their associates are fighting so strenuously. They are battling to maintain their leadership in the labor organizations, and to prevent the subjugation of organized labor by the manipulation of political patronage.

McCarthy is himself a civil service commissioner, but he does not bend the knee to either Spreckels or Taylor. A fight was begun on him in the Union Labor party the moment Taylor became mayor and this fight was led by men holding offices under the city government. Casey is president of the Board of Public Works, and Andy Gallagher is election commissioner. Tom Egan is public works commissioner. He stood in with McCarthy and Tveitmo till after the primaries, and then he tried to deliver the Union Labor convention over to Spreckels and Langdon.

This explains why organized labor will not touch Taylor and Langdon at any price. McCarthy and Tveitmo are men of brains, and they clearly see that if the labor unions are made an appendix to the political machine Spreckels, Heney, Phelan and Langdon are so carefully piecing together, the labor forces will be disrupted and bereft of any true leadership.

But whoever conceived the idea of getting control of the labor unions by giving leaders fat jobs under the city government is a man of resource and discernment. The scheme certainly never originated in the brain of Spreckels or Langdon. Very likely, so the story is told, Heney was the person who thought it out and had it set in motion.

It seems that it was because of Tirey Ford that the graft prosecution attempted to turn Danny Ryan down cold. Up to a certain stage everything was being framed up to drop the poet-mayor over the side, and make Ryan the new Moses of Reform.

All of a sudden there was a shift, and Ryan was ordered to go way back and sit down. He had developed certain independent proclivities which were regarded with much disfavor.

But the real reason why Ryan was sent the bowstring was that Tirey L. Ford supported him in the primary two years ago. It is stated on the street that when Spreckels learned that, he marked Ryan off his books and put him under taboo.

The Ryan fellows are very wrath at the summary turn-down of their leader. Some of them are talking about dumping Langdon and taking up a Republican who is a real lawyer for district attorney. They will probably get cold feet or heart failure when the time comes and fall in a faint before Langdon. Still some of the things they are saying are highly interesting.

"I don't see what right Langdon has to expect anything from us," said one of Ryan's adherents to me yesterday. "He is standing in with Taylor all along the line, and is in the scheme to run Taylor independent in case Dan takes the nomination. He's no Republican and no lawyer, and the immunity contracts ought to kill him."

"Besides I don't see what call we have to pay Harriman's political debts. Something is coming to Langdon for beating Bell for Governor, but it's not our place to give it to him. Whatever claims he has should be presented to the fellows we knocked out at the primary."

"I don't believe the railroad people are fighting Langdon very hard," continued the politician, who was just sore enough to shoot his mouth off freely. "He did them the greatest possible service last fall, and he has never done them any harm. Some of the newspapers have swatted Herrin pretty hard, and Heney has done some loud talking about Harriman's lawyer, but Langdon has never opened his rap, and none of Herrin's people have been jammed. When he was making his fake run for governor, Langdon never once attacked Herrin or Harriman. I don't see that they have any call to take his scalp any more than we have to take him up as a club to beat out the brains of Dan Ryan, who is against both Herrin and Harriman. It looks as if we were getting jobbed from both ends."

If Theodore Halsey does split on the higher-ups in the telephone company there will be a merry old time and some fine work cut out for that smoothest of smooth articles, E. S. Pillsbury. When Pillsbury was swearing so hard against Louis Glass and old stagers were wondering at his nerve and admiring his cool audacity. I don't believe a single lawyer in San Francisco believed the story Pillsbury told on the stand. Yet it sent Glass to the pen for five years.

If Halsey gives up his insides there will be something doing sure. I don't know that he will, but there are rumors that he is getting ready to follow the example of Ruef and Gallagher. The prosecution has been hoping to get him ever since he was brought back from Manila, and some of the telephone magnates have felt decidedly uneasy over the knowledge that Halsey could purchase immunity by betraying his employers. And Halsey is not the sort of a fellow to relish the role of scape-goat for rich men.

RICH PRIZES ARE AWARDED

Hundreds View Distribution, Including Foothill Lot, by Furniture Company.

There are hundreds of people in this city who will remember the opening of the new store of the Braloy-Grote Furniture Company, 1338-1336 Broadway, between Seventh and Eighteenth streets. There are several reasons for this remembrance. It may not be necessary to mention all of them in this connection. It may, however, be stated that one of the reasons the magnificent display of furniture which delighted the vision of the thousands of visitors on the night of the opening. The next reason is the number, value and variety of the prizes which the firm in question offered the public as a memento of the installation of its new home. These prizes were awarded by means of lot yesterday afternoon and evening.

There was only one prize disposed of at the afternoon drawing and that was a lot in Foothill Park, valued at $500. The lucky man was H. O. Erickson, of 855 Isabella street, in this city.

The scene of the drawing was then changed to the store of the firm on Broadway last night and there were not fewer than two thousand people on hand as the disposal of the various prizes took place.

J. R. Law and R. L. Clark, both of this city, were chosen as judges.

LITTLE GIRL BLINDFOLDED. After the judges had been accepted, a little girl was selected from the throng. She was blindfolded and it was she who drew ticket after ticket from the box which decided the ownership of the social prizes. The drawing resulted as follows:

THE WINNERS.
Second prize, a St. Clair malleable range, first ticket, 15,632, second ticket, 21,025 not claimed.
Third prize, chiffonier, M. D. Farr, 1127 E. 15th st.
Fourth prize, Turkish rocker, first ticket, 11,215, second ticket, 22,426.
Fifth prize, princess dresser, first ticket, 11,025, second ticket, 35,750.
Sixth prize, Melbaugh kitchen cabinet, first ticket, 19,232, second ticket, 29,312.
Seventh prize, cigarette, first ticket, 19,025, second ticket, 34,591.
Eighth prize, lady's desk, first ticket, 247, second ticket, 614.

GIGANTIC AUTOMOBILE BUILDING IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—The city of Chicago is building a gigantic automobile building which will be the largest automobile building in the world. It is located on the corner of Madison and Dearborn streets, and will cover an area of 100,000 square feet. It is expected to be completed in the near future.

THOUGHT HE WAS DAVID HARUM

But He Proved to be the Antithesis of that Hero as a Horse Trader.

JOPLIN, Mo.—A strange form of hallucination developed here when L. D. Roberts, a middle-aged living in Central City, was taken in charge and later removed to the asylum for the insane in Nevada. Roberts formed the opinion that he was a David Harum. The first demonstration of his horse trading ability was shown when he tarried his house and lot in Central City for an old, half-blind gray mare. Afterward he bought a blind, crippled animal and paid several hundred dollars for it.

FIRST NATIONAL ROAD BUILT IN AMERICA

In 1749 one Cressap, an engineer in the employ of this company, followed the trail of a deer and mapped out the country between Detroit and Pittsburgh. Five years later General Braddock, grim determined, angry because the struggling colonies could give him no more men and money to prosecute the war with the French, passed this same way as he came to the council of Alexandria, Va. He built a military road from Fort Cumberland, Maryland, to Fort Duquesne, now the site of Pittsburgh. Later a branch from this followed the "Great Trail" of the Indians and linked Detroit with Pittsburgh and East.

On the road he built Braddock met his defeat. He was killed and his body was buried in the road as was the passing of his dream. The road was built by the Ohio and Pennsylvania companies and it was the longest straight road ever built by any government going almost due west. Runyan was living with Mrs. Carter, and his arrest was a result of betrayal by her. Instances of half a dozen citizens I swore out a warrant for assault and battery. I had six witnesses to swear that the defendant struck first, and, in fact, he admitted it, but the justice gave him the verdict and his liberty. I got mad at that and went for his honor with my fists. "Don't you see this black eye?" "I certainly do." "Do you think all six of my witnesses lied?" "I do not." "Didn't the defendant as good as admit that he struck me?" "He did." "Then will you please tell me why he was not punished?" "I will. You were beaten on technicalities." "I don't understand." "Well, you didn't prove whether it was your right eye or your left that was blackened, whether he struck you with his right fist or his left; whether you are married or single, whether you belong to the church or the world, whether you are a Democrat or a Republican. I could name at least ten other things." "You might give me one more from your stock," I said with a sneer. "I will sir. You heard the chief adjourn court. That was formally. Technically, court is always in session, and I therefore fine you five dollars for contempt."

STREET IS BLOCKED FOR SMALL COIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—There was much excitement on the Bowery when a motorman on a south-bound Third Avenue car tied up the line for nearly fifteen minutes trying to find a 25 cent piece he had spied in the center of the track. The coin was lying in the groove of the rail. When he brought the car to a stop the wheels of the rear truck were directly over it.

This the motorman did not know, and he crawled under the car to see if the coin was there. A large crowd soon gathered, thinking something was wrong. The discovery was made at Grand street, just at the time when the streets were badly congested and traffic was at its height. Several policemen soon arrived and wanted to know what the trouble was about. It wasn't

The great toe was injured and illness resulted.

GROWTH OF THE COCAINE HABIT IN NEW YORK

A law has just gone into effect in New York State which forbids the sale of cocaine or any of its admixtures, except upon the written prescription of a reputable physician, and that prescription may be filled only once. Wholesalers may supply the drug only to licensed pharmacists or druggists, registered practicing physicians or dentists and veterinarians. And all packages must be labeled "poison" and on that label the name and quality of the cocaine or its salts must be distinctly described. Violation of this law is punishable by imprisonment for not more than a year, or fine of not more than $1000, or both. It appears that this law was procured by the labors of Rev. James B. Curry of St. James Roman Catholic Church on James street—a church in the midst of the poorest people of the later immigrants. Mr. Curry found the drug sold in the Bowery shops as freely as if it were Epsom salts, and avers that some of the dealers have been sending out agents to sell the "dope" in the streets. He says there are more than 80,000 victims of the deadly habit in the city, and that once in the way of it, these people are the most degraded of criminals.

AUTO RUNS 115 MILES AN HOUR

Owner Plans to Race in California for $25,000 Stake.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—A speed of 115 1/2 miles an hour was attained yesterday on the Brooklands motor track by a 200 horsepower eight-cylinder Darracq racer on the trial arranged at the instance of Dugald Ross, a wealthy American who has been searching for the fastest car in the world, stipulating a speed of at least 100 miles an hour.

After the trial Mr. Ross bought the car on the spot for $10,000.

He intends to enter it for a race of twenty miles for a stake of $25,000 to take place soon in California.

WILL MODIFY NAVAL TURRETS

Explosion on Georgia Brings Recommendation for Changes on Battleships.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Secretary Metcalf has made public abstracts of the report made to the Navy Department by the special turret board appointed to provide against firebacks similar to that which caused the recent explosion on the battleship Georgia. The synopsis of the report as given out does not give the exact cause of the Georgia fireback.

Ordnance officers of the navy unanimously agreed after the Georgia accident that the fireback on the battleship was caused by the cylindrical loading gun stopping up the apertures through which the automatic air blasts eject the burning gases forward through the bore of the gun, after having diverted the current of air so as to form an eddy near the muzzle which blew the gases back through the breech.

Orders were immediately issued by the department that the loading pans on all the ships be examined and that none of the Georgia type be used. The loading pan on the Georgia was a special design used by the gunners to gain speed and was not recommended by the Bureau of Ordnance. For this reason nothing in the report referring to the cause of the Georgia fireback is made public.

Certain modifications of the present type of turret are spoken of which it is asserted will give increased speed to the gunners and at the same time allow safety in the handling of ammunition.

PARIS IS NOW SCENE OF WAR

Social Conflict Between Harriman and Fish Moved to French Capital.

(BY VIOLA ROGERS.)

PARIS, Sept. 21.—The social war between the Harriman and Fish factions has been transferred to the battlefield for the time being in Paris. So cleverly is the coming social war for supremacy arranged that the Harriman forces are not aware of the ammunition being prepared by the great general of the opposition Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish who proved herself to be a very Napoleon of social leadership during the visit of Prince Wilhelm of Sweden at Newport and by her present skillful management of the impending winter campaign in which the social strength of the Harrimans will be fully tested. In any event, a Waterloo is ahead for somebody, and Mrs. Fish is determined it will not be for her—hence the Paris activities.

HOLD GREAT SECRET
I have learned that Mrs. Fish has undertaken the leadership of the pretty young daughter of Mrs. George Gould who will make her bow at the most wonderful ball ever given in New York. The ball which Mrs. Fish will give will be the same evening it is understood as that Miss Harriman selects as her coming out night.

The greatest secret is being observed to keep the details of the splendid affair from the opposition camp but so wonderful are the arrangements that everyone in the secret is bursting to babble about it.

Mrs. Fish has figured that a triumphal season by Miss Gould under her guidance will eclipse anything that may be given for Miss Harriman whom it is understood she refused to launch socially and which caused the railroad rupture resulting in Stuyvesant Fish's dethronement.

However one learns in Paris that the Goulds have given Mrs. Fish carte blanche to make their lovely daughter a social star of the first magnitude and she is going to do it.

GOWNS IN ANTIQUE STYLE

One of the great dressmakers of Paris has undertaken to compose the gown for the debutante also those for the Fish ball which will be in the style of the Louis Seize period. Every costume worn by the debutante will be copied from some famous beauty of that wonderful French epoch and the entire setting will be in Louis Seize furnishings. Mrs. Fish herself has sent the dressmaker drawings from which Miss Gould's gown is to be made as well as her own daughters and those of other young women who will participate in some marvelous tableaux and dances as a feature of the stunning tournament ball.

The favors are all being made here. They are beautiful novel and costly things of the Louis Seize period. Quaint old models vanity boxes fans and other extravagant trinkets. Garlands of the most exquisite made artificial flowers so perfect that they will hold a mirror up to nature will festoon the ballroom and it is understood in Paris that Miss Gould's appearance in a genuine historic sedan chair of the period.

ARMY TO KEEP SAME SYSTEM

Board Will Make No Change in Method of Inspecting Schools.

The Washington authorities have finally refused to change the existing system of making annual inspection of military schools on the Coast and elsewhere throughout the country say local army officers. Recently some of the military colleges which are inspected annually by officers of the general staff of the army complained that they were inspected too early in the season, and it was suggested that a fairer method would be to have all the colleges inspected at once.

This request was held to have its merits, which are bound to be considered by the War Department authorities, but to have all the colleges inspected at the same time and near the close of the school year would require it was held a larger number of officers than can possibly be spared for the duty, and more over the more officers making the inspections the greater would be the difficulty in obtaining a uniformity of inspection and maintaining a standard from which to judge the relative merits.

For this reason only four officers were detailed this year, at least to make these inspections, and due allowance was made for the fact that the inspections were made at different times. It is believed by Army men that the present method of inspecting these colleges where there are army officers as military instructors is the best which can be devised.

Hurrah For Me At the Byron Mauzy Music Building

Here I am back again in dear old Oakland. Gee, but the town has grown since I have been away. I went to the Key Route Inn Hotel, rode up in the auto buss. I have always wondered why Oakland hotels didn't meet the trains here with a bus and put on city airs. Then I came down town, and honest, I had to ask where the store was. Same old City Hall, though I wonder why some milk man don't buy that old shack and tie cows up in it—it would make a fine cow barn. Then I spotted the store. Same old store. New clerks, though, lots of 'em. Lots of old faces, though. Saw Sohst Gomes, Pladwell, Houts, Alexander, Wheeler, Lewis, Bill Quinn, my old friend Bill, the shoe man. New girls in the office. Watch Willie spruce up and buy some new fall togs. Oh! I tell you, I feel at home, and for the next two weeks I will help out at Idora Park, where this store will have an Auto Exhibit, showing new things for auto people to wear—that is, they auto. Same old josh, you know. Same old Willie, the office boy, at C J Heeseman's, 1107 to 1117 Washington st.

MUCH INTEREST IN S. P. SUIT

Battle Between Texas and Railroad Is Drawn to a Focus.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—Southern Pacific officials in particular and all western railway men in general are watching with great interest the suit brought by the Texas Railroad Commission against the Southern Pacific for violation of the commission's order compelling the corporation to operate a double daily passenger service between Del Rio and El Paso.

The Southern Pacific took off trains No. 7 and No. 8 between these two points on September 1st, after having fought the Texas commission for about a year, the double daily service having been inaugurated at the demands of the commission about a year ago.

FAVORS RAILROAD.
The action was taken after a decision by District Judge Brooks of Austin to the effect that the railroad commissioner exceeded its authority in stipulating how many trains the Southern Pacific should operate, by reason of the fact that the laws of the State of Texas can compel a road to operate one and only one train a day.

Acting on this decision, the Southern Pacific took off the trains between Del Rio and El Paso and at the same time inaugurated an extra train each way daily between Victoria and San Antonio.

IS A GREAT BATTLE.
It is now a battle on purely legal points and the fight will be watched not only in Texas but throughout the railroad circles of the United States. It is a question purely of the legal powers of the State Railroad Commission over the operations of trains within the State.

DEMOCRATS IN FIGHT AT CITY CONVENTION

NEW YORK, September 21.—The Hoboken, N. J., Democratic city convention developed into a fight between two factions in which delegates used their fists, chairs, and other objects. The police tried to stop the fight but were outnumbered. After the fight, the delegates held separate conventions on the same stage and named two sets of city tickets. The trouble started over the efforts of adherents of Patrick J. Griffin, who aspires to be leader of the party in the city, to defeat Maurice J. Slack and his supporters.

SON THOUGHT TO HAVE HIS FATHER'S LOOT

NEW ORLEANS, September 21.—With $200 in cash on his person, George W. Letten, son of Charles E. Letten, defaulting tax clerk, was arrested here today. The police are holding the money, which it is alleged is part of the $100,000 or more which is part of the $100,000 or more which the young man's father confessed to having stolen.

GAMBLERS RATTLE CHIPS UNDER GRAND JURY'S NOSE

Members Visit Chinese Dens and View Contrivances by Which the Orientals Defeat Raids of Police.

Chief of Police Wilson and District Attorney Brown took Foreman Tugler and several members of the Grand Jury through Chinatown Saturday evening on a tour of inspection. The party visited several of the larger gambling dens and looked into the sanitary conditions of the Chinese restaurants in that section. It was particularly noticeable that when the members of the Grand Jury moved in sight all gambling ceased. Wilson and Brown were accompanied by a large number of Chinese who followed them to the vicinity, as a result of which the members saw no gambling in Chinatown.

RATTLE THE CHIPS.
In one place on Webster street the party stood outside the barred windows and listened to the clinking of money and the rattling of chips, but when the doors were opened and the party admitted, nothing could be seen but bare tables. The crowds of Chinese with hands full of money and chips stood calmly by and waited for the Grand Jury to leave so that they could resume their interrupted games. Sergeant Beck, who was acting as guide, pointed out to the Grand Jurors how the Chinese put up steel bars and as line the inside of the rooms with tin so as to hamper the entrance of the police on a raid and give the gamblers time to hide the evidence. The sergeant said that the windows were formerly covered with only a thin wire screen that could be pulled down with a hook and an entrance effected quickly enough to get evidence of the gambling.

The double lock system on the doors, regulated by a string from the wicket keeper, by means of which the heavy doors are bolted shut in the twinkling of an eye, was also shown them. The Grand Jurors seemed decidedly impressed with what they saw, although they gave forth no expression of opinion.

RUEF WILL TESTIFY AT TRIAL OF FORD

SAN FRANCISCO, September 21.—The actual trial of T. J. Ford, on a charge of bribery, will commence in Judge Dunne's courtroom before Judge Lawlor Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The change in courtrooms is made necessary by the holding of Monday services in the auditorium of the Temple Israel.

The first witness to be called will be the clerk of the old Board of Supervisors to prove that an ordinance, for the granting of a franchise to the United Railroads at the time of the alleged bribery, was pending. After this it is said officials of the Mint will be called. It is also stated that Abraham Ruef will be among the first to take the stand.

Judge Lawlor has announced that owing to the fact that the Sheriff has a limited number of deputies he has asked Chief of Police Biggy to station some of his men in and about the court to preserve order. Plain clothes men and policemen in uniform will be present during the trial.

WOMAN IS IMPLICATED IN MURDER MYSTERY

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—The police today arrested Miss Helen Melner, in connection with the murder of Mrs. Lillian White Gant, the teacher, whose body was found yesterday afternoon in a hotel in the southern part of the city and admitted that she had received a letter from him last night in which he asked her to meet him tonight at his home.

LOOKING FOR NEW DRIVER.
A newly-hired driver in the employ of the Davis Grocery company, at twenty-second street and San Pablo avenue, was intrusted with $15 in cash for change by his employer, L. A. J. Davis, yesterday morning. When the driver failed to return with his delivery wagon Davis notified the police.

ELISOR BIGGY IN DILEMMA

Does Not Know What to Do With His Tender Charge, Abe Ruef.

(From Argonaut.)
Public criticism of the manner in which Abraham Ruef has been coddled and petted at the public cost, combined with the fact that Elisor Biggy has been made chief of police, has had the effect of bringing the parlor-boarder phase of Mr. Ruef's imprisonment to a climax. Judge Dunne has continued Mr. Biggy's tenure as elisor, but at the same time has directed that the expense of the Fillmore street establishment shall be stopped. It would have been to Judge Dunne's credit if then and there he had given Ruef his long overdue sentence and directed that he be confined either in the county jail or at San Quentin. But the judge did not go so far as this, he merely told Elisor Biggy that he must find a cheaper way of keeping his illustrious prisoner.

Mr. Biggy finds himself greatly embarrassed, though why we are not able to comprehend. The city jail he declares to be an impossible place to confine Ruef, though why, if it be good enough for other criminals it is not good enough for Abraham Ruef, we fail to understand. Apparently Mr. Biggy has grown so accustomed to regard Ruef in the light of a privileged guest whose tastes and whims are to be pampered that he cannot get a true focus on him as a wretched creature who has been convicted of felonious crimes and whose proper place is the State's prison, with the kind of fare which is held good enough for others of his kind.

LATE SUGGESTION.
The latest suggestion is that, since Mr. Ruef cannot properly be brought to put up with prison conditions, he be permitted to sustain from his private purse the expenses of the Fillmore street establishment. Life likes the place, the beds are soft; he has an excellent cook; and the view is precisely to his notion. Furthermore, the house is pleasantly associated with his old friendship with Eugene Schmitz, whose old-time residence it was, and it is familiar to his social friends, whom he is able to entertain graciously and frequently. If half the stories told about Mr. Ruef be true, he has money enough and to spare to maintain this luxurious life even to the extent, as has been suggested, of paying the special guards provided for his security. Wouldn't it be a pretty spectacle—Abraham Ruef, convicted felon, living handsomely in his own house upon funds gained by his crimes, guarded by men in his own employ? Really, the picture is so pleasing that it is no wonder Mr. Biggy turns from it with reluctance and loathing when he thinks of subjecting a fine gentleman like Abraham Ruef to the discomforts of an ordinary prison. Possibly, when Mr. Ruef finally gets to San Quentin—if ever he does—the superintendent may be induced to move out of his quarters to make room for the illustrious and luxurious Monsieur Ruef.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER FAINT AT SON'S BIER
SANTA ROSA, Sept. 21.—The spectacle of a mother and daughter lying on the floor in a dead faint at the bier of a relative was witnessed Friday night in the undertaking parlors of Lafferty & Smith. The dead man was Roger F. Taylor, son of the Thomas Taylor, who died recently. The women were his mother, Mrs. Thomas Taylor, and his sister, Miss Margaret Taylor.

The young man died quite suddenly and when mother and sister arrived here they immediately went to the undertaking parlors. It was over an hour before Mrs. Taylor could be restored to consciousness. The funeral took place this morning from the Church of Santa Rosa, where a regular high mass was celebrated. Rev. Father John M. Cassin officiated.

THIRD AFFINITY IN WILSON SUIT REPORTED RICH WOMAN

Wife Thinks Husband Seeks to Wed Again

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—A battle in the courts, in which a cross-complaint and the motion of a "counter-affinity" with much wealth may be important features, is promised in the suit for divorce filed against Ida Mansfield Wilson by her husband, William A. Wilson, who named Artist Charles Dickman and Singing Teacher Walter Olney in his complaint.

That Wilson, who is a tea expert, was not deserted by the wife he alleges told him she had found affinities in the painter of pictures and the singer of songs, relatives and staunch friends of Mrs. Wilson, who is now in London, declare.

WILL CHARGE HUSBAND.
Further, they assert she will fight her husband's claim by every legal means, accuse him of stooping to wrongful methods in the effort to gain his freedom and say there is another woman whom Wilson seeks to wed.

Mrs. Shirley Mansfield, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Wilson, who resides in Alameda, declares that Wilson has often told her he intended securing a divorce so that he might again marry. He has sent her letters, she says, which indicate he is not attempting to secure a divorce because of the absence of his wife from his side, but because he desires to marry another, a woman reputed to be wealthy.

WIFE TO FIGHT CHARGES.
The relatives of Mrs. Wilson declare the contest will be fought to the end and that Wilson will be exposed before the suit is ended.

The accusing husband has misstated facts according to Mrs. Mansfield. Walter Olney, the singer who is named in the complaint, went to Europe with Mrs. Mansfield at the suggestion of her husband, declares her relatives.

"These charges are absurd," declared Mrs. Mansfield yesterday, "and when Wilson is through with his trial he will be shown to the public in his real colors. My sister-in-law was compelled to leave. He will be sorry that he ever brought such charges when he is put in a position of proving the truth of them."

URGENT GRANTING OF PARKSIDE FRANCHISE
SANTA ROSA, Sept. 21.—The Merchants' Association has addressed a communication to the Board of Supervisors urging the granting of the Parkside franchise. The association argues that, notwithstanding the scandal attending the efforts to secure the franchise in the past, the Supervisors should take into consideration the benefits that will accrue to the city by granting it. Homes will be built throughout the Sunset district as well as in Parkside, it is maintained, once the people are assured they can obtain transportation. Similar petitions have been sent to the Board of Supervisors by the Chamber of Commerce and by Rufus P. Jennings.

400 FISHERMEN MAY STARVE

Shipwrecked in Bering Sea Men Are Without Food and Assistance Is Asked.

SEATTLE, Sept. 21.—Nearly 400 white and Chinese fishermen, shipwrecked on the shore of Bristol Bay, Bering Sea, are threatened with starvation according to advices received here by the Fishery Union. United States Senator Flies today telegraphed an appeal for assistance to President Roosevelt. The President is urged to order the dispatch of a revenue cutter to bring the men out. They were wrecked August 9 from the salmon cannery ship John Currier. For so great a number to attempt to pass the winter there would doubtless mean death for many.

Details of the loss of the Currier have never been obtained for the fishing companies interested in the North have been unable to get definite word of the wreck.

and varied and the size of his prison house fragrant and salubrious? Why does not Judge Dunne pass sentence upon this scandal as he would upon another? Why does not Mr. Biggy put his prisoner along with others under his care?

Is it surprising that under the circumstances there should be questions and sneers with respect to this whole matter? Is it surprising that the integrity of the prosecution is a matter of question? Is it surprising that even Judge Dunne is not spared in the general censures which rise in connection with this whole wretched business?—Argonaut.

TOKAY FIESTA ENDS MERRILY

King Hogamus Comes Floating in When Wild Night Fun Begins.

STOCKTON, Sept. 21.—The carnival at Leoti closed with a grand "Tokay" tonight. King Hogamus Tokay (George Hogan) assumed the throne and ruled over a merry madrigal until long after midnight.

The floats were thronged with people en masse, and a conflict battle was waged for hours. The king floated down the Sacramento river in a large decorated float for the occasion, entering the city down the main thoroughfare on a water wagon resplendent with colorful colors.

REVELRY REIGNS.
The coming of the burlesque king was the signal for the commencement of a revelry, and the hilarity with boundless. So many were the crowds today that railroad facilities were totally inadequate. Railroad men expressed their surprise at the large throngs attending the carnival.

The Sacramento dam and huge crowds came from that city to view the novel exposition. The Tokay carnival, the first ever had anywhere, has been a big success in every way and congratulations have been pouring in to the projectors. In the clearing of the plaza there was a throne where in the evening Queen Zinfandel held court.

In the afternoon the queen led the way to the field near the town where the spectators and cowboys tried to ride on the queen's horse. The queen, in taming bronchos and roping steers.

COWBOYS A FEATURE.
Here the grays were for the time being forgotten. The star of the show was Oklahoma Joe, who held the center of the stage. This was none of your well-known cowboy, but a real wild west show. It was as unexpected as a rain shower. Joe Agnew tried to ride on a bucking horse and after many cautious advances and wary attempts succeeded in seating himself on the animal's back.

It walked off as unconcerned as if it had been ridden every day for a year to the great chagrin of Joe and the more abundant delight of the spectators. On the other hand there was Oklahoma Joe, an innocent looking strapping fellow who was given a "bull run" to saddle and ride. This animal looked more like a cart horse than a wild west cowboy, but when Oklahoma Joe got into the saddle, or hovered over it as he nearly as he could, there never was seen an exhibition of bucking. It all ended in the roar of the bolting through a heavy fence and falling on top of her rider in the dust of the corral an outcome which fortunately was less serious than it appeared.

SPLENDID ADVERTISEMENT.
The establishing of the annual Tokay carnival, expected to attract the advantages of grape culture in the local district as well as to celebrate the reaping of a $2,000,000 harvest. Large ranches which have hitherto proved only moderately profitable for ordinary agriculture are being divided into small farms of ten and twenty acres, each one of which will produce more returns than the original ranch. It is a splendid advertisement of the future of the Tokay valley.

Leoti has remarkable dreams of future prosperity and greatness and many of these it will fulfill before the close of the rest of the world from year to year in the festival of the Tokay, under the reign of Queen Zinfandel.

The Truth About the "Furniture-on-Credit" Business

Our books show that most of our sales are made to old customers, which proves beyond all question the satisfaction and practicability of our "furniture-on-credit" system of doing business.

Why in the world do these people come back again and again if their experience with the "furniture-on-credit" system didn't prove that it paid and was the only way to easily furnish a home.

And when you come to think of it, it is the only way to furnish a home. Suppose, for example, you have $300 in the bank, do you think it would be wise to take all that money out—that money you've worked so hard to save, perhaps—and spend it right out cold for furniture? How long do you think it would take to get another $300 in bank if you did?

No, the way to do would be to leave that money right where it is and come to us and arrange to pay a little every month out of your salary, not out of your bank account—and in a year's time you'll have your furniture paid for and your bank account intact.

It is easy to economize in order to pay furniture payments but it isn't so easy to economize to put money in a bank because the first HAS to be done and the second can be put off. Then again when you have a furnished home you can save easier; for your home supplies means of entertainment that would cost money otherwise—it's a pleasure to stay at home and save when you feel that all that surrounds you belongs to you alone.

"Yes," you reply, "all that sounds very well, but everything always costs more on credit." Now that's a mistake, as far as we are concerned, at least—we sell furniture on credit at exactly the same average prices other firms ask for cash—and why shouldn't we? We are receiving cash right along from hundreds of customers who bought months ago.

These people are paying us now for past purchases and their cash as it rolls in serves us as well as your spot cash would—all we lose is interest, and it amounts to nothing compared with the friends we make by our system.

And just one thing more (then we won't bother you again for several days), and that is that we make no embarrassing investigations when you buy on credit here. In fact, if you are honest with us we make no inquiries at all, nothing is ever said about your buying on credit to anyone; we are willing to take your word for everything.

POET SAYS NOT TO TRESPASS

Joaquin Miller Bothered by Visitors Who Crowd His Door Yard.

Joaquin Miller's recent visit to Oregon and his return to Oakland with the avowed determination of remaining in California until he is called away, appears to have augmented his popularity, for his ranch in the hills east of Oakland is more than ever the Mecca of visitors from home and abroad. So many people throng his front yard and the picturesque cottage which serves him as dormitory and writing room (since all his composition is done while sitting up in bed) that he has posted on his gate the following placard:

Please! Please!
NO TRESPASSING!
Nothing to See Up Here Except
Better Views Further On.
Said the Poet to the Poet: "We will not trespass upon the pretty carpet of Nature today, but leave the ferns and flowers and all things clean and pretty to adorn the path of the Prince who comes tomorrow with this mortal coil."

"I guess if people knew I don't mean that seriously," said the "Poet of the Sierras," "at any rate they don't heed it. But it is no different just now since the grass is dry and dead. However, I am planning to change my old place and go to the appearance of a Japanese garden, with terraces and all that. Some things that I saw in Oregon led me to this decision."

OREGONIANS PLEASED.
"Speaking of Oregon, do you know that during my recent tour of that dear old State, which has so many times honored me and which I have so often loved, I saw to you know that I have succeeded in bringing the vile word 'Weebster' from the vocabulary of that people. Any offensive to people of refinement, never wither, unless the climate is so hot that it is classed as with this mortal coil. 'Weebster' must die."
Whereas this doctrine is derived from words which signify "hear the water, my earnest protests are greeted with applause," showing how strongly the people feel on this subject, and how determined they are to wipe this foul blot from their country, I don't think that Oregoniens, if they tar and feather the wretches, who persist in calling them "Weebster," for that is worse, if possible than "Weebster." It's almost as bad as "Frisco."

TOD SLOAN IS NOW BENEDICT

Famous Jockey Marries Julia Sanderson, the Pretty Little "Fantan" Girl.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Tod Sloan, former jockey and at one time esteemed as the cleverest rider in the world, was married this evening to Miss Julia Sanderson, the pretty little actress playing the part of Peggy the Dairymaid, at the Criterion.

The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock by the Rev. Henry Marsh Warren, in Mr. Sloan's apartments. The only persons present were Miss Mayhew E. Gibson, who acted as bridesmaid; William Baldwin Sherrin, who served as best man, and Frank Lee.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mrs. Sloan rushed to her dressing-room, and across the street to be ready for the evening performance.

Few of her friends knew of the marriage. It was generally expected the wedding would take place tomorrow.

Mr. Sloan stated this evening that, with Mrs. Sloan he was contemplating a trip abroad.

Mrs. Sloan is not yet twenty-one years of age. She made her first hit before the footlights two years ago in "Fantan."

JUVENILE COURT KEPT BUSY WITH OFFENDERS

The good work of the juvenile court goes on and Judge Melvin, of the Superior Court, Samuel of the Oakland City Court, and Edgar of the Berkeley Town Court, are beginning to work overtime. Judge Melvin had nine cases on his calendar yesterday afternoon; Judge Samuel had eight on Monday, and Judge Edgar had seven on Thursday. The youthful offenders and incorrigibles will not longer be dismissed with a little lecture by the police because they have no other means of helping the child. Nor will he be dismissed with a little longer lecture by a judge or justice, to straighten out what manner of lecture it was, and return in six months. He will be placed instead on strict probation, with weekly reports from school or employer to the probation officer; or, if this proves ineffective, he will be promptly sent to the Whittier State School, or to some other state institution.

BOY VIOLATES PROBATION.

One boy, Willis Gould, the leader of a gang well known to the police who are on duty about Sixteenth street depot, was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Bert Brown yesterday afternoon at the request of Probation Officer Buss, and at the four o'clock session of the court, the boy's mother and his school principal being present, was committed during minority to Whittier. As Gould is only 14, this places him under discipline for seven years. Gould was already on probation and violated his probation by burning his way to Sacramento and back and then by playing truant again to see the big fire at the Oakland Gas plant.

CHINESE LAD.

Lee Gim Sing, a Chinese boy who also plays truant, was committed during minority to the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society. Lee was sent to the Presbyterian Orphanage and Farm at San Anselmo because he played truant at the public schools in Oakland. He proceeded to run away three times in a row from San Anselmo, and has now been committed to the Aid Society, which has a reputation for keeping a boy fast in spite of the great amount of liberty it allows. Probation Officer Buss says that Lee Gim Sing's family, even though they are Chinese, are a good example for Americans. The father is dead and the mother is making a living for six other children in China. Lee Gim Sing was left behind in America for his education.

Despite the family misfortune, an uncle, Lee Wah, has stepped in and is making a month toward the expense of the boy's maintenance. "Most families try to put it all on the generous county and have small sense of the disgrace of allowing the county to support a child whose parents by a little sacrifice can well enough support themselves," declared Officer Buss.

STEALS FLOWERS.

Herbert Barfield, who recently stole flowers from a florist, with intent to sell them again, was also committed to the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society. Herbert is a boy of 14. Placed on voluntary probation for his flower-stealing offense, he made life miserable for the Chinese children at his school, and had to be transferred to another school. At the new school he played hooky a day and a half out of two, and was forthwith reported to Probation Officer Buss, who had him detained in the Receiving Hospital until yesterday.

Buss wishes to avoid misunderstanding in regard to the badness and the goodness of probation boys of the above three boys two were on probation, and did all, but there will report on Saturday morning a score of probation boys who are doing well, and on working boys' report night as many as thirty report who are doing well. Not all probationers report bad, and once in a while one of them has 212 on his probation files, of whom by far the larger number are real live probationers, who may continue to report all the way from one to seven years longer.

"These figures are argument for a larger force of probation officers," says Buss.

FILIPINOS GET ALONG WITHOUT JURY SYSTEM

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—Judge H. C. Bates of the Ninth Judicial District of the Philippines, a district including the island of Panay and the city of Iloilo, arrived here yesterday afternoon on the liner America Maru.

"The present judicial system in the Philippines is better than any the people ever had before, and is even better than it is in New England. One reason for this is that there are no juries in the islands and there is not the delay that we in this country often experience. The Philippine natives, too, seem to prefer to try their cases before the American judges, for they believe they are strictly impartial as to the people of the islands and that they are not to be bribed. The natives do not forget the old Spanish regime, in which they were mulcted on every hand. There are seven or eight American judges of the fifteen in the Philippines."

Judge Bates has decided to make his permanent home in California, believing the winters of Vermont, his present residence, are too severe for the health of Mrs. Bates. He has not, however, decided upon any particular location for a home.

STOCKTON SHUT OUT SACRAMENTO TEAM

STOCKTON, Sept. 21.—Stockton shut out Sacramento today by a score of 1 to 0 in one of the fastest and most exciting games of the season. Moskin was in the box for the champions and allowed but three hits at wide intervals. Brown was awarded splendid support. His colleagues played an errorless game. Moskin held the visitors safe at all times, though he struck out but one man.

BROOM IS 62; BRIDE IS 49

Couple Give Friends Surprise By "Funning Away" to Be Married.

SANTA ROSA, Sept. 21.—Two well-known residents of Sacramento, William S. Ives, aged 62, and Miss Johanna Ives, aged 49, gave their friends in the Capital city a genuine surprise by coming to this city this morning to be married.

When securing the marriage license Ives confided this information: "We are too well known in Sacramento, and thought we would take a sneak to Santa Rosa, and get married, so as to escape the crowd of friends we have there." Ives' chuckling was worthy of one much younger.

ANOTHER COUPLE.

Another out-of-town couple who came to be married today were George A. Bigelow, 23, and Miss Jessie E. Griffin, 19, both of San Francisco.

WANT CITY PLANT.

Senator J. B. Sanford and District Attorney Duncan of Mendocino county were here this afternoon as the representatives of the city of Ukiah for the purpose of inspecting the large gas plant here. The people of Ukiah are agitating municipal ownership of a water and lighting system in that place.

PLAN NEW THEATER.

A large and suitable lot was purchased on Third street this afternoon, and preliminary plans made for the erection of a large and handsome new theater in Santa Rosa. It will be built by Mrs. Bridle E. Miller, a wealthy woman, and W. E. Rushing.

HERBERT SLATER.

ADDITIONAL NAMES FOR BANKERS HOTEL

To the Editor of "The Tribune": I would suggest the name "Warona" for the name of the bankers' hotel. That is the name of the largest redwood among the big trees, and this being the largest hotel I think it a suitable name.

MRS. F. W. EDWARDS,
815 Alameda St., Oakland.

SAN HEDRIN.

Charles Lindbergh of 1356 Broadway, Oakland, sends in the name San Hedrin as the proper one for the bankers' hotel.

HOTEL ASCHSCHOLTZIA.

In looking over the names submitted for the bankers' hotel published in "The Tribune," I failed to find the one submitted by me. I sent in my letter about the first of August and my suggestion was "Hotel Aschscholtzia," that being the botanical name for the California poppy.

This may seem a small matter to intrude upon your attention, but the prize (in case this name won) looks good to me.

H. J. RINGER,
1256 23d Ave., Oakland.

EASDALE HOTEL.

I submit the name Easdale as the proper one to be given the bankers' hotel.

ANNA HESSE,

OAKLAND FAIRMONT.

Oakland Fairmont I think would prove a splendid name for the bankers' hotel, hence I submit that in the prize contest.

H. HESSE,

CORRECTION.

Mrs. Curtis asks me to write, correcting errors in your published list to-day. For "Argentaria, Yaberna" read "Argentaria, Yaberna," and for "Publica" read "Publica, Yaberna."

RUNABOUT MAKES 25 MILES IN 27 MINUTES

DEL MONTE, Sept. 21.—Bert Dingley's performance in driving his Thomas 70-horsepower runabout twenty-five miles in 27 minutes and 55 seconds was the racing feature of the afternoon automobile race at the track here. Dingley rolled off miles in 12 and 54 seconds with great uniformity and seemed to have the roadster record for the distance well within his grasp, but the gravel surface of the track wore so heavily on his tires that he had to slow down in the last ten miles.

The fatal accident to Roy Rahm brought the meeting to a premature close. In the fifty-mile race, which ended so disastrously, the Stearns car, owned by Emmett Heider, caught fire in the eighth mile. Charles Heider, the driver, shut off the power and, with his mechanic, fought the flames and saved the car. Although the work and the car were badly scorched Heider continued the race.

Results: Five-mile motorcycle race—Frank Carroll, on a two-cylinder Indian, beat George Nelson on a one-cylinder Indian. He was followed by a hand-cap, and won by 10 feet; time, 1:44.5. Twenty-five mile runabout race—Pioneer Automobile Company, 70-horsepower Thomas, driven by Bert Dingley, beat J. A. Hansen's 45-horsepower Studenaker.

MARLBOROUGH STRANGERS

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough still are complete strangers to each other. The duchess is now at D'Auville, where she has taken a house for two months. At the end of September, however, the duchess will have to return to London to transfer her children to the custody of their father, for the three months allowed under the terms of the separation have expired. The duke is now in Scotland shooting. He never has crossed the threshold of Sunderland House since the separation, but the duke knows better than to endeavor to evade the terms of the separation. His allowance of $100,000 a year from his father-in-law, William K. Vanderbilt, which has been allowed him since his marriage, still continues.

In the duke's impoverished condition to do anything which would enhance the continuance of this allowance would be disastrous. It is little wonder, therefore, that the detectives who used to sleuth around Sunderland House while the duchess was there have been withdrawn, probably on information from the duke's father-in-law.

The cleavage between the dual couple still forms the topic of discussion in aristocratic society. The duchess still shows pleasure in the company of Mrs. Rupert Beckett, the wife of the well-known wife of a Yorkshire banker. This used to be a sorry point with the duke, who was aware that a certain peer, with a handsome wife, had the pleasure of Mrs. Beckett's acquaintance, and through her, that of the duchess.

INVESTIGATE CAR FENDERS.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 21.—The Board of Public Works today by resolution called upon State Labor Commissioner Charles F. Hubbard to make an investigation and inspection of the fenders used on the street cars of the Seattle Electric Company for the purpose of determining whether these contrivances are of any account for life saving purposes.

RELIEF CORPS BOOTH.

The women of Lyon Relief Corps, No. 8, W. R. C., will serve peanuts, popcorn and sweet drinks at their booth at the carnival at Idora Park. They will also have fortune telling by some world-famed fortune teller. Come one, come all.

S. P. BUILDING
DOUBLE TRACK

Mountain Division Gets Extra Accommodation Between Sacramento and Truckee.

By building a double track between Sacramento and Loomis via Roseville and doubling the length of twenty different sidings between Loomis and Truckee, the Southern Pacific officials hope to accommodate traffic over the Sierra Nevada mountain division for the next two or three years or until such time as E. H. Harriman shall have solved the problem of converting that division into an electric system. The latter will include a 33,000-foot tunnel that will cut down over 1500 feet of the present elevation, eliminate many curves and permit of a double track all the way between Sacramento and Truckee and thence to Reno.

EXPENDING BIG SUMS. Over a million and half dollars are being spent in extending these sidings and building a partial double track for the mountain division. Many of the sidings have already been extended so as to accommodate forty-five cars and three locomotives.

In places where these sidings are extended in length the snowsheds have to be widened at great cost to accommodate them. A double track has already been completed from Sacramento to Roseville. It is now being extended to Loomis, which is three miles east of Rocklin.

At Roseville large freight yards are being built in order to relieve the Sacramento and nearby yards and to give more space to the growing traffic to the north. The new yards at Roseville and Loomis, which is three miles east of Rocklin, is the junction point of these routes and the officials state it is bound to be one of the great freight yards of California and is intended to reduce to a minimum the danger of freight congestion in Northern California.

ARREST JAPANESE SPIES.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 21.—A dispatch to the "Bourse Gazette" from Vladivostok published today announced that two Japanese officers in disguise had been arrested at Sedanka for spying on Russian troops which were engaged in maneuvers in that vicinity.

CLEARINGS
STILL LARGER
Merchants Feel Effect of Increase in Business.

The prophecy in these columns, a few weeks ago, to the effect that there would be an increase in the business of this city as soon as the fall season approached, has been verified in several ways. To this fact many of the leading merchants have borne testimony, as have also the records of the local clearing house.

Last week the clearings of the banks of this city amounted to $2,428,753.47, while the clearings for the present week amount to the sum of $2,546,016.12.

There is between these nearly half a million of dollars in favor of this week, to be more exact, $247,262.65.

DAILY CLEARINGS.

Monday .....	$1,340,448.12
Tuesday .....	$1,340,448.12
Wednesday .....	$1,340,448.12
Thursday .....	$1,340,448.12
Friday .....	$1,340,448.12
Saturday .....	$1,340,448.12
Total .....	$2,546,016.12

This may be considered a remarkable showing, all the more for the reason that there is a difference of but a few thousands of dollars between the business of this week, in so far as it may be represented by the showing of the clearing house, and that of the same week one year ago, when there were thousands of people here who were, in effect, transients, because many of them have since gone elsewhere.

LEFT MONEY HERE.

Their presence, of course, tended to the increase of business of this city, as it did also to the actual swelling of the amounts which passed through the banks of Oakland. Many of them had, only a short time before, been in receipt of insurance money which had been paid for the losses they had sustained in the great fire on the other side of the bay, and a great deal of this money was placed in the banks of this city.

This money, however, was never considered by the financiers of this city as a permanent adjunct of the local business. A great deal of the money has, for one reason or another, been withdrawn.

Some of it has gone to the construction of permanent structures on both sides of the bay, and some of it has been dissipated in a number of ways.

BIG BUSINESS.

No such conditions exist at the present time and when this fact is taken into consideration, it must be admitted that the business within a year has, relatively speaking, grown to enormous proportions.

Instituting a comparison between the figures in both Los Angeles and San Francisco, there is a decided difference between those of last week and those of this week one year ago as showing a decrease in business, but the percentage of increase is decidedly larger in this city than it was in either, thus proving unmistakably that the growth which this city has experienced has been of the most healthy character.

NEW BANK.

The Bank of Germany is the latest addition to the financial institutions of this city. It was organized yesterday morning and for two hours the interior of the place, as also the sidewalk in front of the corner at 12th Street, was thronged with friends of the new enterprise. Among them were many anxious to be enrolled among the first of the depositors of the new bank.

There were there also people well known in the business circles of this city, representatives of tall, women who work for a living and even little ones with their parents and guardians who were thus early in starting upon a career of thrift.

Theodore Gier, president of the bank, welcomed and entertained the throng and a. Jones, of the bank, who is vice-president of the bank, made himself useful by appearing at the paying teller's window and taking deposits for the purpose of adding Assistant Cashier Schulze, who was overwhelmed with would-be depositors.

MONEY MARKET
GROWS EASIER

Opening Stock Quotations Irregular but Market Closes Strong.

(BY THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Activity in the bond department today again was the prominent feature on the stock exchange. Revival of interest in bonds is usually regarded as the start of a more liberal distribution of stocks among investors and indications that such was the case induced further retirement of short contracts.

The opening quotations of securities displayed some irregularity. The facility with which offerings were absorbed, however, caused a change of sentiment on the part of professional traders and prices were advanced with considerable vigor. The market closed strong at about the best prices.

CALL MONEY EASY ALL WEEK.

New York City 1/4 per cent bonds sold around 107 1/2. With call money easy all the week between 2 1/4 per cent and 4 per cent, and time money also slightly easier, the apprehension about the monetary situation over the crop moving period is becoming less acute. Best authorities say that while money may work a little higher later in the fall, it will not be stringent enough to cause trouble.

Americans in London were maintained at par. The volume was moderate and movements were narrow. Prices closed irregular. The copper shares were easy. Wheat was higher and cotton lower. The curb market was moderately active with the Goldfield shares the feature.

The number of shares of stocks sold today was 154,071, against 407,781 last year.

Far value of bonds sold today, $1,577,000, against $912,000 last year.

While the reports of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific for July show large increases in the gross earnings of both companies, the increase in the operating expenses offsets the good showing and leaves a very small gain in net earnings.

Union Pacific gross increased $1,026,165 but the net increased only $79,338. Gross earnings of the Southern Pacific increased $2,337,531, while the net increased only $47,361.

All the subsidiaries of the Amalgamated Copper Company will next month cut their dividends. It was learned today from authoritative sources 40 per cent to 50 per cent. The Amalgamated company will cut its payment to stockholders this quarter from 2 per cent to 1 per cent. Anaconda's rate is likely to be $1 or $1.25, as against $1.75 last quarter. Boston and Montana will make a cut of 50 per cent.

AOKI TO REMAIN.

TOKIO, Sept. 21.—The foreign office announced today that Ambassador Aoki will remain at Washington. Baron Tsubouchi, now Japan's Hague delegate, succeeds Ambassador Inouye at Berlin.

COOK RICH

ELY, Sept. 19.—Thomas W. Norton, cook at the Royal cafe, arrived in Ely March 10 last, after wandering from Cobro. Today he is worth $1400 and has made his wealth out of local mining properties. His story is one of which the principal features are, determination, privation and frugality.

On the 7th of March Tom arrived in Cobro from Salt Lake. It was a bitter cold day and Norton sought cover in the little passenger station. As it was early in the morning and daybreak was not due for an hour or so he half dozed on a bench in one corner of the room. He heard some one approaching him but was so worn out that he paid little heed, until crack! and he rolled over on the floor.

THROUGH HIS POCKETS. Unable to pull himself together, Norton dimly realized that some one was looking through his pockets, and after removing what wealth he had in one trouser pocket rolled him over, taking no care in betraying the trick, and went through his other pockets. When Norton regained his senses he was lying on the floor. He was even worse than that, as his railroad pass to this city and some life insurance papers were also missing. The burg had made a clean job of it, but was considerably enough to refrain from committing murder.

Tom knew there was no hope out in that untraveled section of getting back his belongings, so he waited until the sun arose and then struck out on foot for Ely.

CAMPS IN HILLS.

For three weeks Norton camped on the side of one of the hills that surround the copper camp, and when he saved money enough he invested in a claim at one end of town. He continued to save money and one day saw an opportunity to purchase two claims near the Knob, the purchase price being $300. He gave his son-in-law, Charles C. Rainey, one-half interest in the property and the other half he retained.

Since then he has worked steadily in the restaurant, awaiting an opportunity to dispose of the valuable claims. Rainey went to Salt Lake and while in that city met Father & Mother, who had arrived from Denver where they are in the wholesale liquor business. They also represent a new kind of mining company, which he explained what he had, the result being that he sold his claim to the two men for $1500. They asked for $1500, but Norton's mine and offered him $1400, which he gladly accepted.

With the aid of the map and the chance to study the questions and answers while on the trip to China, he was able to easily pass the immigration officers on his return and he landed with a woman whom he claimed as his wife. A woman takes the status of her husband and can-

UNEARTH SLAVE
GIRL SMUGGLING

Immigration Officers Find Clever Scheme to Bring Chinese Girls from Orient.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—One more than one thousand purchasers of school lands in the State of California are included in the State's plans to bring from a few dollars to say of hundreds of the total amount aggregating a total of $2,000,000. How to recover this amount will be the subject of special attention in the measure of the Governor to the next Legislature.

When the Korean sails for Hongkong on Tuesday she will carry to the Flower Kingdom one Lee Fung. For Lee Fung will be resting in jail here, where he was placed today on a charge of being in this country without a certificate. And incidentally there will be one slave girl less brought into the United States.

The unexpected termination of the sailing plans of Lee Fung occurred this morning when Fung appeared before Dr. J. E. Gardiner, the acting chief of the Chinese Bureau, to apply for papers enabling him to return to this country at the expiration of his visit to China.

SMUGGLED INTO COUNTRY.

All Chinese who are natives of this country have the privilege of securing regular papers, upon which they can bring a wife into this country without challenge. During the examination of Lee Fung the fact developed that he not only was not a Native Son but that he had himself been smuggled into the United States from Mexico.

Fung was arrested over a year ago when he was carefully pinned on the questions to being furnished with a list of questions and answers and map of the exact spot in Chinatown where he was to swear he had been born.

It further appeared that Lee Fung had been carefully pinned on the questions to being furnished with a list of questions and answers and map of the exact spot in Chinatown where he was to swear he had been born.

PAPER AROUSED SUSPICION.

But Warner's suspicions were aroused by the evident act of the Chinaman in refreshing his memory as to what his own name was. He demanded the paper. The man refused to give it up and turned over to Chief Gardiner for translation. It proved to be a complete series of questions and answers for convincing Chinamen for the examination on the return to San Francisco. All of the questions that would be asked were the replies to be given, were written down, together with the name of Lee Fung.

$63,000 DUE
SCHOOL FUND

Governor to Make Effort Through Legislature to Prod Land Owners.

SACRAMENTO, September 21.—More than one thousand purchasers of school lands in the State of California are included in the State's plans to bring from a few dollars to say of hundreds of the total amount aggregating a total of $2,000,000. How to recover this amount will be the subject of special attention in the measure of the Governor to the next Legislature.

Two PER CENT MORE INTEREST. Two years ago the State of California obtained land by purchase from the United States government, by law and agreement, the payment of the interest on the purchase of the land was to be made by the State of California. This interest has been paid by the State of California, but the State of California has not paid the interest on the purchase of the land by the State of California, according to the agreement given out by the State of California, which is exclusive of the principal of over a million represented by the unpaid interest on the purchase of the land.

GOVERNOR TALKS.

"This matter has been for some special consideration a number of times recently," said Governor Gillett today, "I have consulted with Surveyor-General Kinsbury very frequently about it of late, and I am going to urge the different district attorneys to get busy with the matter. At the next session of the Legislature I will make it the subject of a special paragraph in my message and will recommend such legislation as is necessary to recover every dollar for the school fund."

TERMS OF SALE LAX.

"Under the terms of sale, no provision is made by law for the payment of the balance of the purchase price, it being merely a statement that the sum shall be payable in advance. The balance of the purchase price was only to be paid when the land had become fertile, and the Legislature should enact a law declaring the balance of the purchase price to be payable. It is not likely that this will be done for many years, for the reason that the State has considerable land of this class yet for sale. However, the buyer is not denied the privilege of paying off the balance of the purchase price at any time he may choose, in such sums as he may elect."

The Smartest Suits and Best Values in Town

Are in Kahn's Big Suit Department

Does that heading sound boastful? It is only repeating what women who have seen the other displays tell us. And they must be sincere, for they are buying here at a rate that is giving us by far the largest September business in our history. We have every successful style of the season, from the natty little twenty-five inch coat suit to the most stunning fifty-two inch model. Some of the Suits are tailored with rich simplicity. Others are more or less elaborately ornamented with velvets, fancy braids and handsome buttons. The fabrics include dignified broadcloths, sturdy woven worsteds, serviceable tweeds, elegant Venetian cloths and novelty stuffs—in plain colors, pretty mixtures, faint broken plaids, small checks and stripes. Whether you are ready to buy now or "just looking," you should come and see the style show while it is at its best.

These Are Fair Examples of Our Superior Values

Jaunty Prince Chap Suits $25

Strictly tailored, 27 to 35 inch coats and gracefully balanced full pleated skirts. Made from navy blue, black and brown serges of excellent quality—handsome fancy worsteds—and fine broadcloths in all the new colors. Fine for business wear. Easily $25.00. Our price $25.00.

Elegant Cutaway Suits $35

It shows the exact style of these suits except that the skirts of ours are finished at the bottom with flared ruffles. Note the dashing lines and artistic effects of the tight-fitting 42 inch coat—the "just right" hang of the skirt. Could anything be more becoming? Material is a high grade fancy mixture. Tailoring is beyond criticism. We never offered—you never saw—equally good suits at $35.

Great Line of Suits at $32.50

Several different styles. Among them the cleverest of the clever new models in Prince Chap suits, tight fitting suits and novelty suits. Made from fancy worsteds in a great variety of mixtures, stripes and plaids. Some are strictly tailored—others are prettified with braids and buttons. Would be a splendid value at $32.50. Our special price $32.50.

Special—$35 Suits for $25.00

Tight-fitting 37 inch coats with the latest Gibson shoulder. New model skirts. Splendidly tailored from beautiful finished broadcloths—blue, brown or black. Attractively trimmed with straps and buttons. Equal to the best $35.00 suits to be found anywhere. Our special price $25.00.

$35 Prince Chap Suits for $30

The noble jackets are 27 inches long, and ornamented with silk velvet collars and cuffs. The pleated skirts have a wide flare, and are finished at the bottom with folds. Our special price to start the season $30.

Very Elegant Suits at $40.00

Dashing tight-fitting coats, 42 inches long. Full pleated skirts. Made from highest quality Rumba Venetian cloth in blue, black and garnet. An exact reproduction of a very expensive imported model. # GREAT ACTIVITY IN FALL REALTY BUSINESS

LINE ON WHICH FOURTEENTH STREET WILL BE OPENED TO FALLON STREET Owners of Property Which Will Have to Be Taken in Order to Make Desired Improvement.

In this department of THE TRIBUNE will be found a map of a part of the business district of this city showing in a special manner the improvement which is proposed to make on Fourteenth street in the vicinity of what is now temporarily known as the Bankers' Hotel. This name will be set aside in a few days when the directors meet for the purpose of attending to business of an urgent character. Just what name will be applied to the property is not known, but certainly the directors have a goodly lot of names from which to select one which is representative of Oakland and, at the same time, have a high sounding character which will lend itself to the minds of people who come here as tourists and people who reside in the distant parts of this country and the country beyond the sea.

The location of the hotel on the block bounded by Fourteenth, Harrison and Alice streets is a matter of necessity for Fourteenth street, between Harrison and Alice streets, to be opened in order that thoroughfare streets such as will be introduced into the fronts on the three other sides of the hotel.

PURPOSE IN VIEW.
For the purpose of enabling the opening of this thoroughfare between Harrison and Alice streets, the bankers secured control of a strip of land eighty feet wide between the two streets and have already removed from a part of it a house which had a frontage on Harrison street. The house facing Alice street, directly east of the building removed is still in its old place, but will be removed when there is urgent necessity for its disappearance. For these reasons it may be safely stated that Fourteenth street is practically opened as far as Alice street.

FALLON THIRTEENTH.
The council has now introduced, and, indeed, has under consideration, the opening of Fourteenth street from Alice street to the intersection of Thirteenth and Fallon streets.

In order to carry out this improvement there will have to be made a curve at the intersection of the two streets, extending easterly and of Fallon extended northerly. This action has been taken by the council at the request of the Board of Public Works, by the Fourteenth Street Improvement Association, which is a number of citizens and property owners who demand that that thoroughfare shall be opened to the benefit of the public convenience, next as an accommodation to and making more serviceable the bankers' and other business buildings. This improvement is included in the beautifying of the park and other places which are contemplated in that quarter in connection with Lake Merritt.

In the map referred to for the carrying out of this improvement is represented by the situation lines with the exception of the territory between Harrison and Alice streets, which, as has already been shown, is under the control of the property owners who are putting up the great $2,000,000 hotel. The street there is eighty feet wide. The property which it is proposed to take on the east side of Alice street is also to have a width of eighty feet, and that territory is included in the resolution of the council having been introduced into the council.

JACKSON TO OAK.
The same thoroughfare between the two blocks on the east side of Oakland street is also to have a width of eighty feet, and that territory is included in the resolution of the council having been introduced into the council.

JACKSON AND MADISON.
In the block between Jackson and Madison streets the twenty-foot strip which it is proposed to acquire belongs to the former wife of E. Merritt, who has a lot there sixty feet in length and 140 feet in depth.

The property, directly east of that is owned by Mary H. Wilson and this property has the same dimensions as those of the Merritt block.

The strip between Madison and Oak streets is owned by W. E. Gibson and H. C. Ingram, and Oakley Avers, the last-mentioned having the lot on the west side of Oak street, 115 by 150 feet, and the other two owning the lot on the east side of Madison street, this latter lot having a width of 100 feet and a depth of 140 feet.

The property at the head of Fourteenth street on the east side of Oak is owned by the former wife of E. Merritt, who has a lot there sixty feet in length and 140 feet in depth.

REALTY MEN OF THREE CITIES UNITE IN COMING BIG CARNIVAL Purpose of Advancing Alameda County Shown by Dealers in Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley.

The carnival which is to open at Idora Park next Monday night will set forth, to advantage, the unification of Alameda county. In it, all sections of this county will be represented as well as every line of business and every kind of industry.

Among these lines of trade will be the realty business which has grown to great proportions and in which there are thousands of dollars here invested. The principle of unity will be specially illustrated for the reason that the three leading cities of the county will appear really represented under one head. Each city will work for its own interests and for those of the whole county. This is a system of harmony which is not found among dealers in this commodity in many other cities, and for that reason is to be all the more appreciated. It is notable for the reason, also, that it illustrates the spirit of rivalry which existed for many years in this vicinity as it has existed and does still exist, in a number of communities in this and other states in this country.

UNITED DISPLAY.
The subject of a united display, at the coming festival, was brought up at one of the recent meetings of the Oakland Real Estate Men's Association, at which A. H. Bred presided. For the purpose of carrying out the idea, President Bred appointed a committee consisting of J. J. Rosborough, of the Canizales-Rosborough Company, W. J. Lawrence, of the Lawrence Real Estate Company and George Lewis of the firm of Crown & Lewis. These gentlemen were given full power to act and it must be said, that they have discharged their duties in a most comprehensive and successful manner.

The committee communicated with the real estate dealers in both Alameda and Berkeley and requested them to send a committee to a conference to be held between representatives of the three largest cities in the county for the purpose of making a united display at the carnival and the good heartedness with which the request was responded to showed that the proposition was received with favor by fellow tradesmen in the neighboring cities. This was further attested by unanimity which attended the sessions of the joint committee.

THREE CITIES UNITED.
The representatives in the conference from Berkeley, were Messrs. Sullivan, Knap and Holmeyer. Alameda was represented by Messrs. Phillip, Hammond and McLaughlin. Berkeley was represented by Messrs. Sullivan, Knap and Holmeyer. Alameda was represented by Messrs. Phillip, Hammond and McLaughlin. Berkeley was represented by Messrs. Sullivan, Knap and Holmeyer.

This joint committee appointed J. J. Rosborough of this city chairman and this gentleman has, since that appointment, worked with assiduity in carrying out the purpose of the organization. The representatives of the realty men in the three cities referred to made arrangements with the management of the carnival to rent a space on the floor of the great pavilion of Idora Park, south line Fairview street, 207 feet east of Shattuck avenue, $2,500.00. John Stricklin, one-story eight-room dwelling, south line Forty-third street, 657 feet east of Pearl, $150.00.

Another project which the realty men referred to is to have a fine central place where they may meet every day and talk over a variety of subjects pertinent to their business. They are now discussing the idea of securing a right to use the stock exchange during certain hours of the day. The project is favorably received by many of the dealers and it will not be long before these enterprising members of the community will have a home which will enable them to advance their common interests in a manner which will inure not only to their city advantage but also that of the cities on this side of the bay as also of Alameda county.

The expenses attending the leasing of the booth space and in the decoration of the same has been borne by the following realty firms: Realty Syndicate, Wickham Havers, O. E. Holt, F. K. Mott Co., Lawrence Real Estate Company, Canizales-Rosborough Company, A. J. Snyder, George W. Austin and Crown & Lewis.

Unused Hostelry Makes Way for New Electric Line of Southern Pacific.

The new hotel Avalon on Telegraph avenue between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets is being moved south and east from the place on which it was built, because the Southern Pacific Railroad Company has purchased the ground as a part of its proposed right of way for its line from this city to the broad gauge mole after the system shall have been electrified.

When the building gets on its new foundation there will be an addition put to it. This will have a width of eleven feet on Telegraph avenue and of thirty feet in the rear.

With this addition will give the hostelry sixty rooms all the eastward march will be to a distance of ten feet for the purpose of enabling the sidewalk on Telegraph avenue to be increased to twenty feet.

HURRY WORK ON GOULD'S ROAD

Hundreds of Men Engaged on Western Pacific in Alameda County.

There is little knowledge entertained in this city by the average resident of the progress, which is being made by the Western Pacific in its upward march towards the place, speaking on the subject, a well-informed and moneyed man of Oakland said to a representative of THE TRIBUNE: "You can't tell the morning when you will wake up and hear the whistles of the trains of the Western Pacific running along a third street."

Of course there is no immediate prospect of having that desideratum realized, but there is good reason to believe that the road will be in operation between this city and some of the points east of here by the latter part of next year.

This opinion is based only by the fact that there are thousands of men at work in the construction of the line at a number of places in this county, as also in the various counties in this State, through which the line extends and beyond. There were never more men at work in an improvement of any kind in this county than there are now at work for the Western Pacific. They are numbered by the hundreds, and when it is possible for the number to be increased there is no hesitancy on the part of the contractors having the work in charge to give employment to all who desire it.

IN VARIOUS AVOCATIONS.
These men are strung all along the line, some grading, some tunneling, some building bridges, some building viaducts, some driving stakes establishing the line, and many who are engaged in various grades of scientific work, all kinds, which are called into requisition by railroads.

WANTED ABLE-BODIED MEN.
There is a scarcity of money for this work. There are millions behind the project, and when a man earns his wages there is no necessity of looking for the way. In this connection, it may be said that able-bodied men who desire employment, may be accommodated at half a dozen places along the line in Alameda county, to say nothing of the opportunities offered further toward the east.

IN EAST OAKLAND.
In East Oakland, there has been a great deal of the grading been done already, and this is open to view to people who take the train of the Southern Pacific, between this city and Melrose, and to those, in a special manner, who go farther toward Niles and also in the direction of Stockton.

The first view of the work is to be found a short distance east of Thirteenth street.

CAPITAL PUTS UP NEW HOMES

Quarters Provided Weekly for Several Hundred Persons in Oakland.

There was a slight decrease in the amount which will be expended in the construction of the buildings for which permits were issued during the week ending Wednesday, September 18, 1907, but not enough of difference for any one to be displeased with the showing. The records of the office of the Board of Public Works show that the city is advancing at a lively manner and, at the same time, that the growth is of the most healthy character.

MEANING OF DEMAND FOR HOMES.
When there is a demand for homes in a community, it shows that there are people on hand who are seeking to establish themselves in that community. The fact that they seek homes shows that there is something in the place or the vicinity which impels them to take up their abode there.

It is not enough a general thing, it indicates that employment of the kind preferred by the home-seeker is to be had in the immediate vicinity if not indeed in the place itself. These indications of advancement are prominent in the records made by the records to which reference is made in the foregoing.

HOMES FOR WORKERS.
The majority of the structures provided for in the permits of the Board of Public Works are unquestionably for the use of workmen. This shows that these people have come to stay and there is no doubt at all that they will be followed by others. In this manner, the population increases from week to week and the result is a gradual expansion in lines of business in every direction. A city which is required to furnish homes week after week for not fewer than fifty new families, will be readily admitted as making a progress which ought to be most gratifying and at the same time conclusive that it is on the high road to metropolitanism.

INDUSTRIAL ENTERPRISES.
While the capitalists of this city and the working people themselves are providing abiding places, there is a satisfactory increase in industrial enterprises. In fact several of these latter have been provided for in the permits of the Board of Public Works, and it is to be expected that the record which will be found in another part of this department of THE TRIBUNE.

FIRST WARD LEADS.
In making a comparison of the wards, it becomes apparent that the First ward takes the lead in the building development. The structures which are to be constructed there as a consequence of the permits for this week will cost considerably more than fifty thousand dollars.

These new buildings are not the only ones which are in course of construction in this city at this time. They simply amplify the list of those which were commenced last week, the week before, and the week before that, and, indeed, for several months back, because there are a number of buildings approaching completion on which forces of artisans have been working steadily for a number of months.

NO IDLERS.
This means that there are no idle people here save those who are unwilling to work. Of course there are such people to be found in every community, but there is no person to be blamed for the presence here of any such persons except themselves.

At a low calculation there are not fewer than four hundred buildings in course of construction or improvement in this city. There has been no decrease in this average for several years, and one of the most agreeable thoughts in this connection is the certainty that this record will be kept up throughout the winter and the succeeding spring. This is something which cannot be done in any city in the East and indeed in some of the places located around the bay of California.

WORKING HARD ON NEW HOTEL

Curb stakes have been put in place for the purpose of outlining the Foothills Boulevard in the vicinity of this bridge over San Lorenzo creek. The city is anxious to complete this, that the inauguration of the road on that great county improvement on the Howard end of the undertaking. There is a great deal of satisfaction over this fact for the reason that it satisfies people in the interior of the county that the boulevard in that section will be completed at a much earlier date than had been expected. It was feared that another winter would see the great undertaking unfinished and regretted the fact for the reason that they had suffered many annoyances from the condition of affairs since the inauguration of the improvement.

The company which has the contract for the building of the road has established two camps. One of these will be located near San Lo-and Oakland is one of two to the majority of the citizens. The road is in a frightful condition at the present time and it is dangerous for vehicles to pass over it.

All through the city horses are going up and a sanitary inspector, Mellett says, it seems, is not bathing of the building though at this time of year there is usually a lot up. The real estate dealers are all distressed with conditions and are all working for the carrying of the bonds.
